Jobs, Not Jags.
Old Time Bartenders.
The Dole? Not Yet.
Students and Young Robins.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

"WETS" IN THE House are told they may have only one vote on prohibition, for repeal or modification. Senator Ashurst from Arizona, who agrees with Senator Shephard, the Democrat from Texas, that "wets can't get anywhere," contributes this line to the discussion, "People are looking for jobs, not jags," supplementing the statement of another dry, "The people want bread, not beer."

The sad, prosaic fact is that with the blessing of prohibition upon us, anybody that chooses can get "jags," whereas jobs seem difficult.

THE OLD-TIME bartender did not drink what he sold. Invited to "have one," he would take a little seltzer water, or a cigar "to smoke later."

Bootleggers, off Barnegat Light, early yesterday, possessing a ship and a barge loaded with champagne and other cheer for New York's New Year, were less cautious. They drank their stuff and sang loudly. Customs officials arrested 20 of them, seized $250,000 worth of liquor, and said "Much obliged." Singing and bootlegging do not mix well.

EDWARD F. McGRADY, representing the American Federation of Labor, says the government must not "shirk its responsibilities" and must give idle men a dole, or supply states, cities and isolated districts with money to take care of the idle.

The Federation of Labor has given $52,000,000 in the past two years to help needy members, but can't keep that up forever.

THIS, THE FIRST demand for a dole from any responsible source, might play an important part in the 1932 election.

However, Vice President Curtis says that this coming year will be called "A. D. 1932," the A. and D. meaning "After the Depression."

He believes, as do many others, that this country will be "on the highroad toward prosperity before the coming year ends."

GERARD SWOPE, president of General Electric, a sound business man, shares Vice President Curtis' ' opes for 1932 and expects the beginning of a gradual, steady improvement.

WALL STREET was more cheerful yesterday, if that means anything.

"Call money" rates for the first time went above 3 per cent. Bonds were stronger. But Wall street's cheerfulness was based on the fact that 15,000 shopworkers on the Southern Pacific Railroad had agreed to a 10 per cent cut in wages, and acceptances of wage cuts generally are expected.

DR. McCRACKEN, head of Vassar College, says:

"Students are not people, because they do not function as people should. They are not influential, as they should be, in the management of their colleges, or in control of public opinion."

Perhaps Dr. McCracken expects too much from the young.

You don't ask young robins to catch worms while in the nest. Boys in colleges are little birds in the nest, freed from the necessity of thinking.

BOMBS ADDRESSED to Italian Fascists in New York killed two postoffice clerks at Easton, Pa., and injured others. One was addressed to the editor of an Italian paper which supports Mussolini's government.

This, unfortunately, will cause more of the too frequent, ignorant denunciation of the Italian people, who have done so much for this country, to say nothing of the fact that one of them discovered it.

EDITOR POPE, of Il Progresso, for whom one bomb was intended, might remind anti-Fascists that those objecting to Mussolini's government should tell him about it in Italy. Those sending bombs in the United States are apt to be deported to Italy and Mussolini's welcome might not be very cordial.

USUAL NEWS from Manchuria. Chinese retreating before Japanese, the latter working with airplanes, "bombing the Kowpangtze railroad station, inflicting heavy casualties."

It is difficult for the Chinese, a courageous people, to fight on the ground against men in the air, and in perfect safety, sending down bombs and machine-gun fire.

Those who look upon Asiatics as more brutal than themselves will notice that the Japanese are not yet using poison gas, to which "civilized Europe" resorted without loss of time.

HARVARD PROFESSORS ask the League of Nations to tell Mussolini that professors in Italian universities should not be required to take an oath of allegiance to the Fascist regime. The request will have no result and is therefore harmless.

Men that take office in the United States, from the President down, are compelled to take an oath to support the American regime. Nobody in Italy protests. Why not mind

TEXAS GUINAN

Hostess Denied Ride In Patrol; Drys Take Chairs

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Texas Guinan welcomed a squad of prohibition raiders to the Planet Mars last night with her customary:

"Hello Sucker."

But today she was "a little disappointed" with the raid on her night club here, she confessed, explaining:

"It was a little dead. Not a shot was fired."

However, the Broadway hostess declared she had witnessed raids that were worse. She went on:

"Everybody was just dandy.

"Of course, some of the playboys may have to sit on the floor tonight while seeing in the new year. Uncle Sam—bless him!—took away all our chairs."

Tex denied she owned the planet Mars, but she was under technical arrest, although denied a ride in the patrol. An agent told her:

"It's too crowded. There are too many of your waiters and managers in the wagon already."

Praying Murderer Faints at Life Term

DETROIT, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Mark Sellers, 46, fainted today when he was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of John Barrett, "small time" bootlegger. Sellers had just pleaded:

"As God pitieth the poor worm in the dust, so pitieth thou me."

COUNTY JOB SHAKEUP OUSTS 18

Treasurer's Office Hit as Cain and Brown Swing Ax; Aftermath of Vote Seen

Eighteen employes in the offices of the county treasurer and delinquent tax division were dismissed today as the forerunner of a probable wholesale shakeup in county departments as the aftermath of the November election.

Robert S. Cain, who shifts from sheriff to county treasurer next Monday, notified seven employes of the office of the present treasurer, John Francies, that their services would no longer be needed.

Those dismissed include Edward E. Duff, deputy treasurer; Miss C. Emma Kaylor, secretary to Francies; Mrs. Caroline Zimmerman, secretary to Duff; Paymaster William Conner, former register of wills; John Stafford, a clerk in the paymaster's office; Harry Chalmers and Mrs. Gertrude Magee.

John Brown, Jr., who succeeds Walter J. Christy as delinquent tax collector, sent dismissal notices to 11 clerks in that division. Six present employes did not receive such notices.

Those discharged were: Miss Elizabeth Hale, James Duncan, George Couch, Jerry J. Madden, Harry Clyer, Frank Dody, Charles Seidle, Miss Dorothy Newell, Miss Theresa Billante, Charles S. Wilbert and William L. Martin.

Harry B. Bunting will be retained as chief clerk, it was said.

SUSPECT PAL IN SLAYING OF BANDIT

Bullets From 2 Guns Found In Body of Man Shot by Wounded Holdup Victim

Examination of bullets taken from the body of Tom Sords, 21, of 3651 Brighton road, who was killed in a gun fight with a North Side grocer, today raised the possibility that a third man may have taken part in the battle.

Jamse L. Davidson, ballistic expert of the Coroner's office, said Sords was killed by a 38-caliber bullet from his own gun that entered his brain. A 38-caliber bullet from the grocer's gun pierced Sord's lung, Davidson said.

Slain Sords

Carl Lange, grocer, of 805 Allegheny avenue, wounded in the left hand when shot by Sords, who with two guns was threatening Mrs. Lange, told Davidson he used a 38-caliber gun inthe fight. Sords, police said, had a 32 and a 38-caliber revolver.

Police were faced with the problem of whether Sords shot himself in the head after being wounded by Lange, or whether Sords was shot the second time by a pal who feared Sords would talk.

Lange told Davidson when Sords fired at him he was wearing a cap and an overcoat.

When the body was found, police said, the overcoat and the cap were missing and a small coat had been pulled over Sords' head. Police said that a pal may have taken the hat and coat.

Chicago Orchestras Prepared for Strike

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Unless a settlement is effected, celebrated orchestras, including those of Paul Whiteman and Ben Bernie, will go on a "radio strike" at midnight.

The musicians' union is demanding seven days' pay for six days' work.

Woman 26th Victim Of Radium Poisoning

WATERBURY, Conn., Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Mrs. Edith Lapiano, 25, the twenty-sixth victim of radium poisoning, was dead here today. The illness attacked her while painting luminous watch dials five years ago.

FINLAND KILLS PROHIBITION

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Finnish voters have decided overwhelmingly against prohibition, returns available tonight on the referendum held Tuesday and Wednesday indicated, and the national Parliament is expected to repeal the dry law almost at once, leaving the United States the only country under prohibition.

With nearly 200,000 votes tabulated tonight, advocates of repeal had cast 144,635 ballots, as compared with 38,247 for the prohibitionists. Only a few thousand votes were cast for light wine and beer, an alternative measure.

Women voters registered nearly a four-to-one protest against prohibition, much to the surprise of the drys.

Dr. Ramsay, leader of the wet forces in the Helsingfors City Council, predicted tonight that at least 63 per cent of the entire electorate will be found to have declared against prohibition when all the returns are in. Reports from the rural districts are expected to reduce the wets' present lead but it is virtually impossible to overcome it.

Dr. Liakka, prohibition leader, blamed the dry defeat upon the heavy snows.

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—Severino Veronelli and Claudio Cattaneo, young Alpinists, met a strange death on Grigna Mountain when they slipped and fell 1,100 feet. At this point their rope caught on a protruding rock and jerked them to death.

MAILS UNDER GUARD, REDS BLAMED

Wrecking of Public Square Frustrated in Ohio City; U.S. Sleuths Seek Assassins

Reverberations today of the bomb explosion in Easton's postoffice yesterday included these:

1—Discovery of a similar bomb sent by express from New York frustrated an attempt to kill the Italian consul in Cleveland.

2—Postoffices throughout the country were warned to be on the alert for similar deadly packages.

3—Federal and state investigators believed the explosion part of a widespread Communist plot.

4—Police were guarding Italian consulates in Pittsburgh, New York and other cities.

5—The Italian ambassador called at the State Department in Washington to discuss the outrage.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—An attempt to kill Count Cesare Buzzi Gradenigo, Italian consul here, was foiled today when a package, sent him by express from New York, was discovered to contain a bomb.

The package was taken by police officials to the outskirts of the city and exploded there harmlessly by firing a rifle shot into it. Police Inspector Cornelius Cody said the bomb, a time device, contained enough explosive to have blown up half a city block.

The package was about the size of a shoe box. It was labeled "Table service and set." A girl employe received it at the consulate on the tenth floor of the Society for Savings Bank Building, located on Public Square, the heart of Cleveland.

The bomb plot was discovered by Capt. Amelio Ardito, secretary to the count. Noticing that the packing was unusually heavy, Capt. Ardito became suspicious of it. He telephoned William Trombetta, publisher of a New York Fascist newspaper, whose name appeared on the box as the sender.

Trobetta, a friend of Count Buzzi-Gradenigo, told the captain he had sent no package to Cleveland. Capt. Ardito then called police.

U. S. Sleuths Trailing Easton Postoffice Killers

EASTON, Pa., Dec. 31.—The secret service today sounded a warning to postoffices throughout the country to be on the lookout for packages similar to those containing bombs mailed here yesterday, leaving death and destruction in their wake.

At the same time, federal and state investigators asserted that Communists were behind the

Bomb Scare Given Vatican by Woman

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—A young woman with a French accent and a small valise, who insisted on seeing Pope Pius to give him a present, caused a bomb scare in the Vatican today.

Papal authorities became suspicious and induced her after much argument to open the valise. It contained dolls, magazines, newspapers and other articles. Authorities escorted her to the Rome police.

6 Snowbound on Bus Without Food Saved

Steamship Feared Lost in High Gale

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Fear that the Tamaho Maru, with a crew of 50 men, had sunk or was foundering in an 80-mile an hour gale 1,500 miles out of Vancouver was expressed today by marine authorities.

The Japanese steamer signaled for help yesterday. No further calls were heard despite efforts of radio stations to contact her. The Empress of Russia wirelessed that she was rushing to the assistance, but that mountainous seas were making her progress slow.

Pittsburgh Woman, 5 Others Trapped For 21 Hours

LIMON, Col., Dec. 31.—(INS.)—With only one apple to divide among them for food, and suffering from cold and exposure, six passengers, including a Pittsburgh woman, were rescued from a Pickwick motor bus today after spending 21 hours inthe deep snowdrifts three miles west of here.

A crew of state highway employes with snow plows and tractors worked more than five hours to rescue the party.

Seats and interior furnishings of the bus were used as firewood to keep the passengers from freezing, a tool box serving as an improvised fireplace.

The six marooned passengers gave the following names: Edna R. Dulin, Pittsburgh; H. W. Colyer, Kansas City, Mo.; U. L. Yelton, Batesburg, S. C.; Richard Cormelly, New Haven, Conn.; L. A. Adamson, Boulder, Col., and L. J. Ashford, driver of the bus.

Miss Edna R. Dulin, 32, one of the six passengers rescued from the snowbound bus, was until December 1 a stenographer for the Fidelity Trust Company. She lived at 808 Cedar avenue, North Side. Miss Dulin was employed by the trust company for 11 years. She resigned and announced she was going West.

Einstein 'Enrolls' At California Tech

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 31.—(AP.)—With an eagerness not surpassed by any freshman, Dr. Albert Einstein, noted Berlin physicist, who arrived here yesterday, "enrolled" today at the California Institute of Technology.

He will spend two months or longer in an effort "to unify gravitation and electricity" and prove that his latest conception of the universe is correct.

SCHOOLEY JURY IN RECESS

The December grand jury investigating the official affairs of Roy D. Schooley, discharged city treasurer, adjourned this afternoon until 9:30 a. m. Tuesday, when it is expected indictments will be recommended.

Today the jury, it is understood, considered a rough draft of the presentment which will be whipped into final shape over the New Year holiday by District Attorney A. T. Park and his probe assistants, George F. P. Langfitt and H. R. Phillips.

Rebates of penalties and interest to political favorites and others, it is believed, constitute the most serious development which the grand jury has to deal with. It is held that while no one profited by such refunds except the individuals who received them, the person responsible for such practices is liable for embezzlement.

The search was being continued today by the Clerk of Court's employes for the itemized expense account of Mayor Kline's 1929 campaign, which disappeared some time after representatives of the District Attorney's office examined it last week in connection with the Schooley probe. Belief was expressed by those responsible for the record that it had been mislaid. The Schooley investigators said the disappearance of the document had no bearing on their case.

Little Whoopee, Much Rain To Greet New Year

Rain for everybody and a scarcity of customers for the night clubs were this afternoon's predictions.

With the lowest number of advance reservations in years listed at many of the places where whoopee greets the New Year, gloom dropped to a new level as Weather Forecaster W. S. Broitzman predicted rain for tonight.

If the rain is heavy, the night life entrepreneurs fear the already large number of home parties, substituted for the usual night out, will materially increase.

Churches throughout the city and county were planning watch night services even more pretentious than usual with which to welcome 1932.

Wales Pulls Old Clock Trick on Royal Parents

LONDON, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, were giving a blase Mayfair something new to chortle about today during the cocktail hour.

The two princes, being quite human, it seems, are heirs to human quirks.

When boredom battened on them while they were visiting King George and Queen Mary at Sandringham on Christmas Eve, they set the clocks ahead one hour and bustled their royal parents off to bed.

They then stole silently from the house and drove in a fast motor car 85 miles to the home of Lady Furness at Melton Mowbray, where they joined in a gay party until dawn.

Returning to the royal residence, the two princes found themselves locked out. After considerable effort they roused a shivering servant, who admitted them.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT ORDERS TROOPS TO HOLD CHINCHOW

CHEN FORBIDS SURRENDER OF CITY

Marshal Chang Overruled; Japanese Soldiers Within 15 Miles of Objective

NANKING, China, Dec. 31 — (AP) — Despite Chang Hseuh-Liang's retreat from Chinchow, China's new National government is determined to defend that city against the Japanese advance, Eugene Chen, the foreign minister, told the Associated Press today.

He asserted:

"Our government will assume all responsibility for Manchurian affairs and after the inauguration of the cabinet tomorrow our order to Chang Hsueh-Liang to hold Chinchow will be repeated.

Nanking never ordered Marshal Chang to evacuate Chinchow, he said, but on the contrary is determined that he shall hold the city.

Meanwhile, official circles today said the National government has despatched new protests to the League of Nations and to Tokio regarding the situation at Chinchow.

Japanese Troops 15 Miles From Chinchow

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Dec. 31 — (AP) — Japanese cavalry, advance guard of Gen. Tamon's column, reached the banks of the Taling River tonight and were within 15 miles of Chinchow.

There were no indications of serious Chinese resistance and it was believed the Japanese forces would celebrate the new year by the occupation of the city which has blocked the march of the whole of Manchuria for three months.

Marshal Chang's army was in full flight, scattering thousands of refugees northward toward the Great Wall as fast as the crippled Peiping-Mukden Railroad could cover the ground. The confusion was increased when a squadron of Japanese scouting planes circled over the railway yards outside Chinchow and soldiers and civilians, fearing that the place was about to be bombarded, scrambled into dugouts.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — (INS.) — Injuries suffered in an explosion at the Naval Research Laboratory proved fatal today to William E. Carver, 30, ordnance expert. James T. Lane, Negro, also was injured in the blast. They were destroying condemned mine detonators in a small magazine durout.

Merchant Vanishes, Police Begin Hunt

Missing Persons Bureau operatives today were asked to search for David Y. Jones, 72, of 609 Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, who has not been seen since Monday, when he left his confectionery store to take a walk. His wife, Mrs. Mary Jones, said she was unable to explain his absence.

WITH EDDINGTON, Jeans and other great scientists saying that the universe is running down and can't be wound up, it is a pleasure to hear from Prof. Bridgman, Harvard physicist, that modern men and their science cannot answer any definite question about the universe.

What does a cockroach at the bottom of a battleship know about running the battleship or replacing it with a new one or with airplanes? Nothing but it knows as much about battleships as any scientist knows about the destruction and renewal of the universe.

LEAPS TO DEATH IN RIVER

A man believed to be Charles Morgan, 48, of 2038 Tustin street, leaped from the north end of the Twenty-second Street Bridge this morning and was drowned in the Monongahela River. Morgan had left his brother, Albert, in the home which they occupied with their sister a few minutes before, saying he was going for a walk. Last night a physician called to attend Morgan said he was suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Augustus Stevens, 4739 Langhorn street, saw a man climb to the railing and leap.

Daley, local manager of the express company, stated.

Chicago Taxpayers' Strike Upheld by Court

CHICAGO, Dec. 31. — (AP.) — The 1928 and 1929 assessment rolls of Cook County were held invalid today by County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, plunging Chicago and Cook County finances into more dangerous financial straits as more than $100,000,000 taxes for those years are returned unpaid.

The validity of the 1930 tax rolls now due, is similarly menaced.

The decision was given in a test case brought by taxpayers with the backing of an Association of Real Estate Taxpayers. They challenged the validity of the assessments made by the county assessors and board of review on the grounds that a vast amount of personal property had been fraudulently omitted from the rolls.

As a result of the ruling, Chicago faces a possible receivership. No taxes can be collected under Judge Jarecki's decision, until a new assessment can be made and upheld.

Bankers have declared the situation a virtual strike of taxpayers.

P. R. R. RETIRES 47 VETERANS

More than a score of Pennsylvania Railroad employes residing in the Pittsburgh district spent their last day at work today and tomorrow were to be placed on the retired list. In all there were 47 veterans retired in the Central Region, two of them having records of more than 50 years' continuous service.

The 50-year men are Leonard W. Bessey, baggage master, of Oil City, and John Davis, inspector of motive power, of Mt. Morris, N. Y.

CLAUDY GIVEN ROCKVIEW POST

The Rev. Dr. J. W. Claudy, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh Council of Churches, has been appointed general superintendent of Rockview by the State Welfare Department. Warden Stanley Ashe, of the Western Penitentiary, said today. Dr. Claudy will assume his new duties tomorrow.

Dr. Claudy is to have complete charge of the Rockview prison, where the death house and the honor farm of the Western Penitentiary are located, according to Warden Ashe. He was to leave for Rockview today after a conference with Warden Ashe.

Dr. Claudy had been executive secretary of the council since April 1, 1929, when he succeeded the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Zahniser. Before being selected for that position, Dr. Claudy had been secretary to the Board of Temperance and Moral Welfare, Presbyterian Church.

CALL PINCHOT ON U. S. RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, will testify Monday before the Senate committee considering direct federal unemployment relief.

Long an advocate of federal aid, he urged President Hoover to call an extra session of Congress last fall to provide for it.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot last night asserted the Republican state organization, "with Gen. Edward Martin as its ostensible head," was directly responsible for the failure of the special session of the Legislature, now adjourned, to provide relief for the unemployed.

He said the extra session would go down in history as "Martin's folly."

PINCHOT FAILS TO RENAME HUMES

Mrs. Braun Reappointment Also Omitted; Armstrong Wins Morrow Confirmation

In a group of reappointments made today, Gov. Pinchot omitted the names of Maj. E. Lowry Humes and Mrs. Sara C. Braun, members of the Pittsburgh Registration Commission. Reappointments by the Governor were necessitated by the failure of the Senate at its special session to confirm hundreds of his nominations.

One confirmation was that of John K. Morrow, chairman of the registration commission. It is understood that the influence of Senator Joseph G. Armstrong was responsible for the approval of Morrow. Failure of the Governor to reappoint Mrs. Braun and Humes at this time is understood to be due to his desire to consult his leaders. It is probable that Humes may be permanently dropped from the commission.

Other major appointments today included Mrs. Alice F. Liveright, Philadelphia, secretary of welfare; Dr. Charles Reitell, Pittsburgh, director of the Greater Pennsylvania Council; three members of the executive committee of the council and 65 members of the council; three members of the State Aeronautics Commission, and three members of the State Game Commission who did not resign last week.

Public Service Commissioners George Woodruff, Berwyn, and Frederick P. Gruenberg, Philadelphia, were also reappointed, although this step was not necessary as their appointments are effective until and unless the Senate rejects them.

In addition to the reappointments the Governor also made new appointments today, including these Pittsburghers:

Board Public Accountants: William F. Marsh. Board for Registration of Nurses: Sister M. Placide McCoy. Water and Power Resources Board: E. K. Morse, trustee. Torrance Hospital: Grant Dibert, trustee. Pennsylvania Training School: Mrs. Minnie S. Kaufmann, trustees. Slippery Rock Teachers' College: S. C. McGarvey and Origen K. Bingham, Bridgeville.

WABASH TUNNEL DEAL BACKED BY PLANNERS

County Board Votes 3 to 2 For Purchase of Tube and Bridge as Traffic Link

Purchase of the Wabash tunnel and bridge "as a project" was approved today by the County Planning Commission by a vote of 3 to 2 and the decision referred to the County Commissioners.

John E. McKirdy and S. D. Robison cast negative votes. Robison explaining:

"I wish to be recorded as voting 'no' because the court has not given its approval to the original proposition for the purchase."

PLAN HELD LOGICAL

Thomas Hester, F. G. Lillo and William T. Todd voted for the purchase. S. J. Topley, commission chairman, who votes in case of a tie, did not vote.

Mt. Lebanon residents, including L. T. Stevenson, realtor; S. A. Schreiner, borough solicitor, and R. L. Thompson, Mt. Lebanon Commissioner-elect, spoke in behalf of the project. Stevenson said:

"It looks like the most logical proposition residents of South Hills can hope for in the next few years. People coming into town now are beginning to avoid the South Hills because of traffic congestion."

BUSINESS AID SEEN

Stevenson contended the Wabash bridge and tunnel purchase would aid the point business section, pointing to the deterioration of the district as being due to the transfer of traffic to the upper end of the triangle.

McKirdy asked Stevenson if it were not true there was more traffic all through the downtown. Stevenson replied:

"Yes, but better avenues are provided at the upper end of town."

John Aldinger was elected president. Other officers are J. G. Bennett, first vice president; C. A. Anti-Fascist Terroris Brings Cordon of Police About Many Consulates widespread anti-Fascist plot to blow up Italian consulates in New York, Pittsburgh and other cities.

Meanwhile, search spread to all parts of the east for the two foreign-looking men who deposited the packages here, resulting in the death of two postal clerks, whose devotion to duty cost them their lives when they opened the infernal machines after their suspicions had been aroused.

Postal inspectors and secret service men poured into Easton from Washington, many by airplane, and were joined by state troopers, county officials and New York bomb experts in the manhunt.

One veteran investigator declared:

"The plot is far more serious than casual observers are wont to believe.

"This is the work of the Soviet. The bomb is of typical Russian construction."

Police Commissioner Mulrooney, of New York City, sent George McCartney and J. J. Kennedy, of his force, here during the night and was reported as willing today "to spend a million dollars" and send "50 men" if need be to aid in clearing up the various ramifications of the plot.

GUARD ASSIGNED

Mulrooney assigned heavy police guards over the Italian consulate and offices of an Italian newspaper in New York, to which the bombs had been addressed.

The death toll here was expected to rise to three today, Charles V. Weaver, noted explosive expert of the du Pont Company, of Wilmington, Del., was critically injured late yesterday. He had been engaged to dispose of the bombs. He had opened one and was trying to open the one addressed to "V. Cuto," of Pittsburgh, when it suddenly exploded.

Edward W. Werkheiser, 29, and John B. House, 55, postal clerks, were fatally injured when two bombs went off as the former was examining one of the seven packages mailed after he had become suspicious of their contents.

Examination of the other infernal machines revealed them as the work of an expert in the construction of such bombs. The bomb weighs about six pounds and is contained in a box similar to an ordinary cigar box. When the lid is lifted a contact is made between a small flashlight battery and the fuse of the explosive material in a glass, setting it off.

Italian Consulate Here Guarded in Bomb Plot

The Italian consulate, 514 Neville street, was under surveillance by police scout cars and bomb squad detectives today, after it was learned that one of seven bomb packages that killed two postal clerks and injured five others in Easton, Pa., yesterday, was addressed there.

The package was addressed to V. Cuto. The consul, Dr. Giovanni Guirato, whose consulate was bombed several months ago, declared there was no such person as Cuto in his office.

Questioned by Postal Inspector George V. Craighead, Dr. Guirato declared he knew of no reason why an attempt would be made to injure himself or wreck the consulate.

Italy's Ambassador Confers on Bombing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—The Italian Ambassador, Nobile Giacomo de Martino, called at the State Department today to discuss the circumstances of the bomb explosion in the postoffice at Easton, Pa., yesterday.

In the absence of both Secretary of States Stimson and Undersecretary Castle, the Ambassador was received by Assistant Secretary of State Rogers. Following the conference Rogers said the ambassador had entered no protest and that the conversation had been general rather than specific in character.

Later the ambassador said he regarded the problem as one for the federal officials to handle. He said he expected to file no protest, and added:

"There have been a number of these bombings, including several in Pennsylvania, so we are becoming accustomed to them."

WARNS BANKERS ON NEGLIGENCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—A policy of vigorous prosecution of civil suits against directors of national banks where they are found negligent in their duties has been adopted by Comptroller of the Currency J. W. Pole.

Neglect of directors probably has been a contributing factor in many of the more than 1,900 national and state banks which have closed this year, officials said today.

Bank directors will be held financially liable even in excess of the liability as stockholders where it is shown that through their neglect banking operations have failed to meet the requirements of sound business.

The experience of the Comptroller's office has shown conclusively that many bank directors have little conception of their duties and responsibilities, and that some directors ignore their duties even when called to their attention, one official averred.

Scores of telegrams received at headquarters of NBC today from individual stations showed that a record network will be provided for a pronouncement of a private citizen when Mr. Hearst speaks.

As on previous occasions when he has spoken, Mr. Hearst's remarks will be carried throughout the world through short-wave stations of National Broadcasting Company in Schenectady and Oakland, Cal.

He will speak from the studios of KFI, the Earl C. Anthony station in Los Angeles.

His address will be heard through the Red, South Central, Mountain and Pacific Coast networks, including about 50 stations.

2 RECEPTIONS FOR JOBLESS MARCH SET

Father Cox Caravan to Be Greeted By Pinchot and Johnstown's Mayor-Elect

Two big demonstrations have been planned for "The Father Cox Jobless March," which begins here Tuesday at 8 a. m., according to arrangements completed by the Rev. James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church today.

The first demonstration will occur in Johnstown, where the caravan will be received by Mayor-elect Eddie McCloskey. McCloskey, with a band of delegates, will join the march, which will proceed to Harrisburg, where Gov. Gifford Pinchot will be the official host to the jobless marchers at the second demonstration.

Present indications, based on meetings held by Father Cox which were attended by 2,500 persons, are that at least 1,000 automobiles and trucks will make up the caravan, sponsored by the Retail Merchants of Allegheny County.

The caravan will go first to Blairsville, thence to Johnstown by way of Armagh, to Ebensburg, Huntingdon, Lewistown, Harrisburg, Frederick, Md., and Washington.

Hot coffee will be served the caravan in towns en route. Overnight stops will be made in city parks or in tourist camps, where the men will sleep in their trucks or automobiles.

Two bands will supply music. Father Cox will be the official spokesman, giving addresses in most of the cities en route.

Holdup Slayer Taken To Communion Under Guard of Detectives

A squad of homicide detectives, an altar boy and a priest today formed the few that saw J. L. Keenan, self-confessed killer of his pal, receive the eucharist in Epiphany Church this morning.

Pale, handsome, only 21, the black sheep of a respected Youngstown (O.) family, shook hands with the priest in the Epiphany Church, thanked him and said:

"I don't know what made me do it; it all seems a nightmare."

He walked out of the church with his guard, and was whisked back to the County Jail. There awaits him society's penalty for a fresh-turned grave in a Youngstown cemetery, where the body of Austin Cullinan, 22, reposes.

Keenan confessed his part in the holdup and killing of Cullinan to Assistant District Attorney Roy F. Clunk last Monday.

In the County Jail since Christmas morning, when the tragedy took place in the store of Morris Wolf, 1705 Center avenue, Keenan has been visited daily by a priest.

CULBERTSONS' LEAD GROWS AFTER ROW

Ely's Verbal Battle With Visitor Delays Contest; He Gains 3,900 Points

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—A wordy pre-session argument with an outside bridge expert, involving epithets and threats of use of fists seemed to have brought much luck to Ely Culbertson during the sixteenth session of the contract bridge match ending early today.

Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson gained 3,900 points on Sidney S. Lenz and Com. Winfield Liggett, Jr., raising their plus to 20,220.

The Culbertsons won five of eight rubbers and the series standing became 68 for Culbertson and 52 for Lenz.

FIGHT DELAYS MATCH

The match waited 20 minutes for Culbertson to regain his "emotional balance" after a shambles of epithets, threats, argument and accusations.

Called a "coward" and "yellow," Culbertson offered to fight Sir Derrick Werhner, a 250-pound friend of Lenz, on the spot, finally challenging him to wait outside after the night's session, and then entered into a heated argument with Lenz and refused to resume the match until he had been assured that Sir Derrick had not been invited by his opponent.

Lenz became almost as heated. He assured Culbertson he did not invite Sir Derrick, but shouted:

"He is my friend and I invite him now."

PEACEMAKER FAILS

Referee Alfred Gruenther said:

"Let's start the play."

Culbertson said:

"Not until Sir Derrick leaves and I am assured that I will not be put upon the spot at some future session of this match."

Mrs. Culbertson was almost as angry. Gruenther said:

"Please sit down, Jo."

She declared:

"No, I won't sit down."

She joined her husband in pacing the floor of the hallway just outside the playing room. She remarked there was a plot to disturb Culbertson.

BATTLE OVER BET

Werhner had told Culbertson he accepted his challenge of last July and was ready to put up $2,000 against $5,000 on a bridge match. Culbertson said:

"I don't play with minor sharks."

He denied he had ever challenged him. For a time the conversation appeared to be harmless. Shouts of "Liar, coward, yellow" soon dispelled that supposition.

Culbertson ordered Sir Derrick to leave the place "with your contemptible English accent," and his parting shot was:

"You big yellow beefsteak, I bet you $500 you haven't got $2,000. I'll bet you a team of my assistants can beat you."

Don't Let Boy Friend Begin Taking You for Granted

Remember that old saying: "Be sure you're off with the old love before you're on with the new"?

Somebody should mail that advice to Peggy's ex-boy friend, for though he's dating a new sweetie, he still hangs around Peg.

When [illegible] Peg should [illegible] the date. He [illegible] like the [illegible].

But [illegible] there's her [illegible]. She'd [illegible] but she can't [illegible] face and [illegible] spunky. And [illegible] rather a [illegible] that girl.

For [illegible] that [illegible] her a [illegible].

WANTS TO SEE HER

"Dear Miss [illegible]:

"I am a regular reader of your [illegible] and I hope you can give some advice here, because I seem to have so much common sense myself I feel you will know what I should do.

"When [illegible] appears on the scene and the fellow you're with [illegible] seems to be taken [illegible] the other one, [illegible] out of the picture. I suppose she [illegible]. But tonight in this case [illegible] he's still waiting to see me.

"What [illegible] Is he trying [illegible] handy [illegible] evening [illegible]

"I have [illegible] Sunday [illegible] year. [illegible] that when [illegible] back [illegible] a [illegible] me at [illegible] thought [illegible] him. [illegible] around [illegible] rather [illegible] happen.

MADE NEW FRIENDS

"But nothing [illegible] see her every Saturday and Sunday he keeps [illegible] me at least [illegible] week. I have made new friends and do not go around much. [illegible] really made it up to be [illegible] one and what [illegible] I ought [illegible] to see him.

"However, the idea of playing second fiddle doesn't appeal to me, and I want a few hints what I should do. Do you think I should see him more often? I could, I suppose, but would [illegible] to eliminate the [illegible]. Or do you think I should [illegible] for me to [illegible] and that I should [illegible] picture entirely?

"Please help me. I will follow your advice.

PEGGY."

What [illegible] do? Well, first off [illegible] better [illegible] down and decide what you want to do.

Seems to me it's time you started running your own life instead of letting this boy or someone else run it for you.

I suspect that the whole trouble started right there: not so much [illegible] fickleness as in your own spinelessness. You drifted along. You let him monopolize your time and effort on his part. Soon time he took you for granted and very naturally became bored.

Then along came this new girl and put a spell on his senses. You were a settled and certain habit. She was a new sensation and adventure. I bucked for variety to think he could with her scoff he went.

But in his heart he's somewhat fond of you. You're still [illegible] and comfortable to [illegible] and maybe he's [illegible] of her. Then, he can have you again any time he wants.

That's how he figures you. And it's not an [illegible] Maybe you haven't attached any value to yourself, so naturally he doesn't attach any value to you. He can take you or leave you, wherever he wishes.

Now I want to stop that [illegible] that way by doing a little straight thinking for yourself. Start making yourself a [illegible]. Be busy and [illegible] the next time he [illegible].

Not [illegible] necessarily mean that you should step out of the [illegible] together, but stop giving him special privileges. If you really want to [illegible] interest in you, give him a little competition.

We [illegible] in proportion as we work for them youngsters and we [illegible] a hoot for the things we get for nothing. Remember that and you'll make a bigger, better job of love.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Dr. Copeland's New Year's Message

Tomorrow 1932 will be here. What are you going to do with it?

Dr. Copeland

There can be no doubt that New Year's Day should be more than a holiday. A part of it surely should be given to solemn thought.

Do not fear I shall not preach to you at you. But I should be remiss if I said nothing today about the importance of health.

Your education, influence and wealth will do you or the world little good if you become shattered in health.

You cannot be cheerful, content or good-natured if you suffer aches and pains.

You are not sane and sensible if you are absolutely heedless of your physical welfare.

You are unkind to your family and friends if you neglect your bodily welfare.

I am quite sure the year ending today brought to me personally more shocks than I experienced in any previous year of my life. I refer to the amazing number of sudden deaths among my acquaintances.

Sudden death is not an accident in the ordinary sense. An automobile collision, the breaking of a wheel on a railway train, a slip on the ice—most of such accidents cannot be anticipated and prevented.

But deaths from Bright's disease, heart disease, tuberculosis, cancer and other serious ailments are preventable. In most instances early attention will give complete relief. On the other hand, if neglected these diseases lead to sure disaster.

There is no mystery about how to escape the unhappy effects of disease. It's early discovery is the secret. That's effected by a careful physical examination.

Tomorrow, New Year's Day, always a day of good resolutions, won't you permit me to suggest one. Have a thorough examination made this month. Perhaps you are not very busy just now. Go to see your doctor. Tell him you want him to give you an overhauling.

In all probability you are normal in every respect, but what if it be a comfort to know it? On the contrary if he finds a defect, your good doctor friend will advise you what to do to get rid of it entirely.

Make this resolution tomorrow. You may add years to your life by acting on it.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Purple-ey[illegible] shadows for pansy eyes [illegible] say. Blue shadows for blue ones, brown smears for brown. Pool and pother! There can be no hard and fast rules for make-up. The main point is the deciding factor. An intelligent, far-sighted, well-read woman, after all, can quickly [illegible] what is becoming to her. Something in her brain tells her in less than 20 minutes [illegible] can't go wrong when she selects a flock of a crayons. She knows intuitively what is her type, her style. Lucky femme. She is blessed.

Every hair on the head is not the same color. A thatch of brown hair may include a half-dozen distinct shades. That is why dyeing is so apparent to the trained eye. It is one solid color; there are no lights and shadows. The darker the dye the more it advertises itself as beauty makeshift. Some of the new dark chestnut shades are effective.

Veritzen Insists Upon Seeing Finished Manuscript

The sound of Avis Arlen's giggle and her mother's more musical laughter followed me as I made my way across the room to the chairs where Lillian and Philip Veritzen were animatedly talking together. I knew just the skillful, exaggerated fooleries in which Dicky and Harry Underwood were indulging, and though it was effecting exactly the result I wished—of giving Noel and Mary the opportunity for a talk together, yet I could not rid myself of the mean little annoyance that had seized me at the prospect of our men dancing attendance upon the objectionable visitors, even for the few minutes needed for the success of our ruse. For I knew that Avis Arlen, at least, would count gleefully the acquisition of two more masculine scalps to her collection, and even though I knew how false would be her premise, I exceedingly disliked the idea of Dicky's being labeled as one of them.

But Philip Veritzen's incisive voice gave me something more important to consider than the self-conceit of Avis Arlen. He rose from his chair as I crossed the room and spoke imperatively.

"May I see now what you have done?"

I frantically searched my brain for an excuse to delay matters, found it in the recollection of Dicky's condition over my crumpled manuscript.

"I cannot show it to you now," I said, "because it became so badly crumpled that I thought best to have it copied."

He drew his heavy eyebrows together in a way that every member of his organization knows.

"That will be a waste of time," he said. "But if the thing is finished, I suppose——"

Lillian and I broke into frantic speech together.

"But it isn't finished. Didn't you get the telegram?"

The eyebrows were portentous now.

"What telegram? And did you say it isn't finished?"

"No, of course you must have left your last address before the telegram had time to reach you," Lillian gave me a private little signal to keep silent, and I was glad indeed to let her manage things. "We sent it however just as soon as we received yours—I think yours must have been delayed."

Domineering Mr. Veritzen's voice held an ironical note and his usual perfect composure showed signs of being a bit awry. But that is not the important question just now. Is the play finished?"

He looked at me directly, and I was compelled to answer him.

"No, it is not." I did not intend my voice to sound defiant, but it must have, because Mr. Veritzen's figure perceptibly stiffened.

"May I ask why not?" he asked icily.

"Surely you may ask," Lillian leaped into the breach and began a direct assault. "But it is I, myself, Protector of the Oppressed, who will do the answering. In words of one syllable, more or less, Miss Faith Graham is less than two months old. In spite of that fact, tomorrow after luncheon you will be shown the completed first three acts of the play and a plan of the fourth. To my mind, under the circumstances, it is a most remarkable achievement, and you may just toddle away and roll your hoop in someone else's back yard, for we won't play with you any more."

I made the panicky mental comment that it indeed would be a remarkable achievement if the third act of the play were completed by the next noon. I wondered if Philip Veritzen possibly could guess that though thoroughly planned, it had not yet been begun, and that Lillian had hypnotized, or rather bludgeoned, me into undertaking to dictate to herself and Katherine the 6,000 words necessary for making good her assertion in the telegram that three acts were completed and the fourth planned.

In the next relieved moment I saw that he suspected nothing, for his eyebrows straightened and he made me a ceremonious little bow.

"I am remiss," he said in the courtly manner which is one of his great attractions. "It is only that I am so anxious to get an early production of the play. Otherwise I would not think of hurrying you. But if it is possible, I should like to see the three finished acts tomorrow morning instead of in the afternoon."

I looked helplessly at Lillian for the sudden demand had bereft me of any power of parrying it. But as always, she was ready.

"Get along with you, Phil," she said. "You never got up before 11 o'clock in your life unless you had an engagement as a wedding usher or a pallbearer. You're simply getting delusions of grandeur and as Guardian of the Keep I refuse to let milady be aroused until just before lunch. We'd ask you to the meal only that you probably don't want to eat the Graham rail and then abuse the play. So we'll eat together another day, but tomorrow afternoon we'll get into our fighting clothes and be ready to do battle for the bi-ra-in che-e-ld."

Her eyes were nonchalantly impudent as she finished, but I knew that she was waiting as anxiously as I for his reply to her nonsense. After all, he was the great Philip Veritzen, with the power of life and death over my play.

Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Disobeying Orders Costs Game

Having strong support for only a single side suit—clubs—Z opened contracting on the above hand with 4-Hearts; the opening demand bid of 3-Hearts would suggest to partner that Z had a choice of makes. A's cards counted seven probable tricks, and not being vulnerable, he overcalled with 4-Spades. While Y would have been obliged to assist an unopposed demand of 3-Hearts, an opening bid for game did not oblige him to assist upon a single trick, and he passed, as did the remaining two players.

The opening lead was Y's ace of hearts, upon which Z played his lowest. Y then led his 3 of hearts, upon which Z played his 10, and A won with a trump. Two rounds of spades pulled down all opposing cards of the suit, leaving the jack in dummy for sure means of entry. Next A led his king of diamonds, which went to Z's ace, giving him the second defensive trick; there was nothing that Z could do except cash in his ace of clubs, allowing A to fulfill his game contract, and all because Y had disobeyed orders, without even knowing that he had done so.

It is not enough to have bid a suit; the bidder must inform his partner whether or not he should lead a second round in case the bidder's partner lays down a winning card, as Y did when he led his ace. Z's play of his lowest heart screamed "Shift!" Y should have obeyed orders by looking dummy over, to see which shift of suit appeared best. The solid Q-J-10 of diamonds offered no chance to help Z win added tricks, but the minor menace in clubs did offer such a chance. Had Y led through dummy's clubs, Z would have won two club tricks, in addition to the one heart and one diamond that must go to the aces of those suits. Obey orders is a cardinal rule in contract bridge.

I saw the next hand bid and played at 4-Spades. Y-Z went down three tricks. Between now and Saturday think whether or not they could have won four-odd against an opening lead of the king of hearts, and whether the hand should not have been played at clubs.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wearing the Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a man and his wife separate, should they continue wearing their wedding rings?

2. Should these be worn after divorce?

3. What about wearing the engagement ring after divorce, and also after a second marriage? W.

The answers to your first and second questions can be determined only by the people concerned, and their reactions to this. Some people find these symbols of a former happiness very difficult to wear, because of their association. Some, on the other hand, find a certain spiritual comfort in wearing them.

But neither ring should be worn after a second marriage has been determined on.

Proper Form on Walking

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

On various occasions lately my escort has taken hold of my arm while walking along the street. This I resent very much, but I have been wondering if I am in the wrong about the matter. Will you kindly advise me just when it is considered good form for a man to hold the lady's arm? H.

It is never good form for the man to take the woman's arm. On certain occasions it is correct for him to offer his arm . . . for instance, when he is an usher at a wedding or when she needs his assistance in crossing the crowded thoroughfare or in walking on an icy pavement. He may, if he wishes, as they are crossing the street, put his hand under her elbow, but he should not take her arm.

Household Hints -:-

Dissolve a lump of sugar in the water when washing linoleum or oilcloth. A brilliant polish will result.

The secret of well-cooked game or poultry is to baste it frequently.

Scorch stains on white silk can be removed with bicarbonate of soda mixed to a paste with cold water.

Cotton clothes dye well by using colored inks. It is an easier way than by dyes.

Always use lard in preference to butter for greasing cake tins; the salt in butter may cause the cake to burn or stick to the tin.

To clean a discolored enamel bath use cooking salt and paraffin.

Big Ben, Mae Questel, Puccini again, Richard Crooks, a Winchell-cast to Paris, 22 dance bands in an all night party, the chiming of George Washington's clock, Metropolitan Opera, two thrilling football games on the West Coast—we could go on, but there briefly, you have a sample of the novelty and entertainment prepared for your enjoyment tonight and tomorrow . . . We call special attention to the New Year's Eve party on CBS-WJAS from 10:30 until 2 a. m., offering some of the country's leading dance orchestras in Ben Bernie, George Olsen, Leon Belasco, Guy Lombardo, Noble Sissle, and a description of the New Year's celebration—tin horns 'n' everything—from Times Square in New York and Clark and Randolph streets in Chicago.

Darrell V. Martin

The most unique stunt of the radio year will be attempted over NBC-KDKA New Year's afternoon at 3 o'clock—Marion Harris in New York and Bebe Daniels in Hollywood will sing to the accompaniment of Paul Whiteman's Orchestra in Chicago, a synchronized telephone arrangement.

Question a Day:

A friend tells me that he hears trans-Atlantic radio conversations regularly on his set but refuses to show me how he does it. Is this possible with an ordinary receiver? —Howard D., Columbus, O.

Answer—We fear your friend is kidding. Trans-Atlantic radio conversations come to New York from London via "scrambled speech," which may be picked up and interpreted only by those having a key to the secret of conversion. "Scrambled speech" which we have heard many times at the short wave plant of KDKA, is an unintelligible babble about as interesting to listen to as the reading of a telephone directory.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

STOCK MARKET SHARES SCORE ADVANCES

Leading Issues Gain at Least Point, While Some Others Leap Up 3 to 4

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—The stock market dressed itself up today to greet the arrival of the new year.

Most of the leading issues moved up at least a point, while some of the less actively traded shares jumped up 3 and 4 points or more. The railroad stocks which bore the brunt of selling at the end of 1931 seemed particularly pleased with the impending advance of the calendar. Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, New York Central and Chesapeake and Ohio were up to 1 to 2 points or thereabouts.

Industrials which scored gains of 2 points or more included United States Steel, Coca Cola, American Tobacco B, Case and Standard Gas. American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service, National Biscuit, Corn Products and a wide number of others firmed more moderately.

In bidding goodby to the old year, the stock market as usual absorbed a number of cash sales made for income tax purposes. Several hundred of these transactions were registered on the ticker tape. Wall street regarded them as a final vestige of the speculative type of tax selling which was so persistent in December of both this year and last.

The day's firmness of stock prices was regarded cheerfully. While gains were not of great importance from a purely stock market standpoint, it was realized that they would lend a brighter hue to the year-end condition statements of banks and of corporations holding sizable blocks of securities.

Finance World Is Encouraged by Wage Deal

—By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

IN THE EYES of our financial leaders the most important news in yesterday's newspapers was the announcement that the 15,000 shop employes of the Southern Pacific have accepted a 10 per cent wage cut, effective immediately.

This column intimated some time ago that the country's principal financial magnates had little intention of moving heaven and earth to bring about an improvement in security prices until the railway wage question could be settled. They claimed that downward revision of rail wages was absolutely essential to the salvation of the country's transportation systems.

Lately hopes have run high in influential circles that readjustment would be amicably effected. But until the contemplated new deal has been signed and sealed, attempts to force rail and other securities higher may be withheld.

After that, however, a sharp rebound, especially in rail bonds, is predicted.

A SIGH OF RELIEF will go up if the new year can be reached without a final spasm of demoralizing selling in the security markets. The widespread feeling is that once tax-loss selling ceases pressure will be substantially relieved.

I happen to know that selling to establish losses deductible from income tax returns has been unusually heavy this year. Every holder of securities, either bonds or stocks, has suffered shrinkage in his net worth during 1931. The majority of incomes have also greatly diminished. Hence the recourse to recording losses to cut income tax payments to the lowest possible minimum.

Moreover, high-ups have had a premonition that this part of the income tax law would be repealed in 1932. This there has been special reason for wholesale registering of losses.

Incidentally, the financial world cannot for a moment believe that Congress would make any such tax law change retroactive, thus upsetting all 1931 calculations.

A READER who prints it on all his envelopes wants the following given to the world in this column:

THE VICIOUS CIRCLE

When someone stops advertising
Someone stops buying;
When someone stops buying
Someone stops selling;
When someone stops selling
Someone stops making;
When someone stops making
Someone stops earning;
When someone stops earning
Someone stops eating;
Keep Going!!!

GEORGE V. REYNOLDS, head of Chicago's biggest bank, remarked to me:

"In due time the old-fashioned economic laws will clear away the effects of inflation and speculation, prices will again begin to rise, people will take courage and we will be on our way in another period of prosperity."

Mr. Reynolds' batting average as a prognosticator has been better than average.

HAVING SURVIVED 1930 and 1931, surely 1932 cannot but prove less trying.

COTTON RISES, THEN SAGS

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 1 to 3 points on trade buying and covering, promoted by relatively steady Liverpool cables. March sold at 6.51.

The demand was supplied by southern selling and realizing, while the trade demand seemed a little less active than recently and prices sagged off slightly with March ruling around 6.47 and July 6.81 at the end of the first half hour or about 2 to 3 points net lower.

After selling off to 6.46 for March and 6.80 for May during the early trading, the market became comparatively quiet but held steady later in the morning. Some buying was reported on the firm ruling of the grain and stock markets and prices worked up a few points from the lowest. At midday the market was within a point or two of yesterday's close.

WHEAT PRICES SHOW GAINS

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Grains went upward early today, helped by firmness of Liverpool wheat quotations and of Wall street securities. Rumors of a revolt in Russia were current, and were construed as bullish. Opening unchanged to ⅝ higher, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started at ⅛ to ½ advance and continued to climb.

Supplementing the bullish effect of revolt rumors from Russia was word that Russian shipments of wheat this week had fallen off sharply, amounting to only 272,000 bushels against 1,256,000 last week. Russian rye shipments were cut in half. A London newspaper was quoted as declaring the Russian uprising a serious one, directed by Leon Trotsky in Turkey.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Events

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

The last lap of the holiday season is not going to be outdone by the first. Added to all the festivities of New Year's Eve and New Year's Day is news of an engagement, and the marriage this afternoon of one of the most popular girls in the Sewickley social set.

Margaret Rose, daughter of the Don Roses, of Sewickley, is to become the bride of William Hamil Trimble, son of the Maurice Trimbles, of Ben Avon, this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the vine-clad gray stone Sewickley Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Owen D. Odell officiating.

The church is decorated simply with crotons, bamboos and cibotium ferns and lighted by clusters of cathedral tapers.

Giving the bride in marriage is her father. The bride is to wear an interesting simple gown of white satin, having long sleeves and a wide-at-the-shoulder neckline. Cascading from a cap of old lace over a court train of satin will be her veil of tulle. She is to carry lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Her sister, Anne Rose, as maid of honor, is to wear forest green satin, made with a brief cape, fitted lines and a long full skirt. Her hat will be of green tulle. She is to carry Parnet roses with a cluster of talisman roses, African daisies and budlea for contrast.

Bridal Party

The bridesmaids, Jean Evans Rose, a younger sister, Katharine Collin, Margaret Holdship, Mary Franklin Robinson, Emily Frew and Helen Pendleton, all Pittsburgh and Sewickley girls, Mabel Smithers, of Glencoe, L. I., and Jessamine Goddard, of New York, are to wear similar gowns in deep peach-colored satin with which they'll wear brown tulle caps. They'll carry talisman roses, African daisies, yellow freesia, silver wedding foliage and white budlea.

The mother of the bride is to wear wine-colored velvet with a hat to match, and the mother of the bridegroom, black velvet. Both will have corsages of orchids.

John Harvey Trimble is to be his brother's best man, and Robert Maurice Trimble, Jr., another brother, Blair Childs, Thomas E. Shaw, John Evans Rose and Don Rose, Jr., brothers of the bride. Ledlie Watt Young, Alexander Laughlin Robinson, William D. George, Jr., Frank Faber Brooks and Henry Hall Lloyd, Jr., are to be ushers.

Following the wedding will be a dinner and reception for 300 in the Rose home. The house will be decorated with pink roses and early spring flowers against a background of green. The decorations at the bridal table will reflect the color scheme of the bridesmaids' bouquets. Mr. Trimble and his bride will honeymoon in Nassau.

The Charles Howard Johnstons, of Beechwood boulevard, are making known today the betrothal of their daughter, Virginia Louise Johnston, to Harry Chapman Williams, son of the Harry Le Bosquet Williamses, of Brierly Heights.

Announce Betrothal

Tall, slender and blonde Virginia made her debut a few seasons ago.

And while we're discussing betrothals, I've just heard of the engagement of the daughter of former Pittsburghers. The John Saville Cosgraves, of Murray place, Princeton, N. J., formerly of Pittsburgh, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn Butler Cosgrave, to George Howell Shields III, son of Mrs. George Howell Shields, Jr., and the late Col. Shields, of St. Louis, Mo.

Engaged To Wed

The bride-to-be attended Miss Fine's School in Princeton, the Warrenton Country School, Warrenton, Va., and Miss Penrose's School in Florence, Italy. She's a member of the Junior League.

Her fiance attended the Kent School and Princeton, graduating with the class of '31. He's a member of the Princeton University Cottage Club.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SHANGHAI, Dec. 31.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Trouble with me, I been in China too long. If I had only stayed a couple of days I would have had a better idea of China. The more folks you talk to the more you see and the less you know. Always dodge the "expert who has lived in China and knows China." The last man that knew China was Confucius and he died feeling that he was becoming a little confused about 'em.

Yours, WILL.

Finns, Gandhi And Some More Greet New Year

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Here's how they will celebrate the New Year in many lands:

Finland—No fun drinking because it's legal again.

India—Gandhi will be guest of honor in a Bombay riot.

Manchuria—Japan will play two games. One in the morning and the other when they catch 'em.

Wall Street—Holiday to allow the ticker to catch up to the bad news.

Montreal—Town captured by Americans who can't wait for Balto to bring their serum to 'em.

Pasadena — Southern California and Tulane will crush a few petals in the rose bowl.

Switzerland — Diplomats will rope themselves together and climb the Matterhorn. We'd like to tie the rope.

Washington—Ring out wild bells. Three times for ice water.

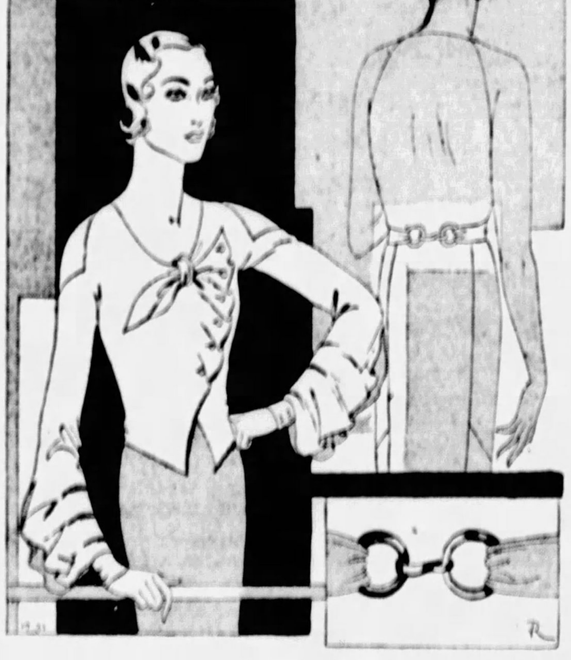
SMART PARISIENNES INDORSE BLOUSES FOR WINTER WEAR

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—Lots of nice novelties about just now, ideal as a tonic for the jaded wardrobe and the wearer thereof. Knitted wear continues to be very successful, sharing in the popularity of wool. Scarfs are more important than ever, brilliant prints being offered for Riviera wear, which means that they will be seen in town during the spring. The simplest little frock can be effectively smartened up and brightened by a scarf, as many of us have already discovered. Blouses are still popular, women demanding a change from the everlasting frock and coat costume that is the thing in winter. And so the skirt with a variety of blouses ranging from hand-knit sweater-blouses to lovely affairs of satin or chiffon.



THE BLOUSE is a successful Paquin model in ice white crepe satin with lots of interesting detail, including the buttoned frill and the slashed ruffled sleeve. The back of the bodice is carried forward over the shoulders in two points at the front. Then there is the buckled belt from Vera Boera which clasps with double rings and a large hook in silver. Although quite separate from the frock itself, the belt fastens at back, an interesting novelty.

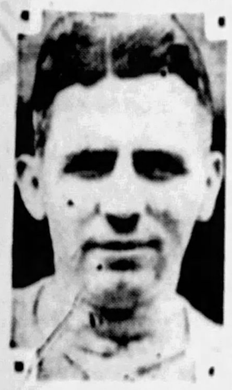
WADDELL THINKS KICKOFF WILL STAY

THAT THERE WAS no real ground for the agitation against the kickoff as a primary cause of injuries and even fatalities in football, and that conditions do not warrant the abolition of that spectacular feature of the gridiron sport, is the information brought back from the annual meeting of the Coaches' Association in New York by Bob Waddell, able mentor of Carnegie Tech, and one of the smartest men in the game, who is a member of the rules committee of the association.



Bob Waddell

It had been charged that many of the serious accidents of the 1931 season, and a large percentage of the fatalities, were due to tacklers being struck by the flying wedge forming in front of the kickoff receiver and running ahead of him down the field. No sooner had a cry been raised against it in one quarter than it was taken up all over the country, and there was a general demand for legislation that would change the kickoff, or do away with it altogether, and at the same time eliminate the flying wedge and its so-called attendant dangers.

BUT ACCORDING TO Waddell the well-meant crusade was a misdirected one. He reports that a thorough investigation by the coaches, nation-wide in its scope, disclosed that none of the fatalities and not even a single case of serious injury, had resulted from the kickoff or the flying wedge. Consequently, the coaches saw no reason for recommending the abolition of the play, and Bob expresses the opinion that the kickoff will stay.

The Carnegie coach tells of another important finding not reported in published accounts of the meeting, a finding which also disproves some of the charges made by football's opponents. It is that among 1,000,000 men and boys who played the game during 1931—500,000 in the collegiate, prep school and high school division and 500,000 in the professional, independent, sandlot and amateur ranks—85 per cent of the casualties reported were of a nature that could not be attributed to any danger in football itself.

ON THE CONTRARY, Waddell says, they were due to slight cuts or mere scratches, which became infected because they were neglected. In most cases the victims were poorly conditioned players or members of teams that lacked trainers or doctors.

Proper attention at the time of injury would have prevented serious developments, the coaches argue. They contend that such scratches or cuts might be suffered in many ways other than in football, and that conditions resulting from neglect cannot be justly be offered as evidence that football is unsafe.

BUT THOUGH THE coaches are in favor of standing pat on the rules, Waddell says they are of open mind on the subject and ready to co-operate with other bodies for the good of the game, as shown by their action in adopting the following resolution: "While the coaches are satisfied with the rules as they are now, they are in favor of any changes that may be recommended by the National Rules Committee which would make the game safer and eliminate injuries. In order to accomplish this, they are going to have every active member of the Coaches' Association, which comprises some 200 coaches, send a personal letter to the rules committee, stating what he thinks has caused injuries this year. They believe that from these opinions, the rules committee will have sufficient information to make any changes necessary. The Coaches' Association will stand back of any changes made by the committee."*

Gaius Shaver

THAT NOTHING CAN be taken for granted in football was demonstrated forcibly again this year, when Southern California defeated Notre Dame after trailing by 14 points going into the fourth quarter, when Army handed the Irish a second reverse, and when Purdue toppled Northwestern.

But with due allowance for the possibility of another upset, the chances from this distance look to be strongly in favor of a victory for Southern California over Tulane's unbeaten team tomorrow in the Tournament of Roses classic at Pasadena.

SOME TEAMS HAVE great backfields. Some have great lines. Southern California has both. The class of Gaius Shaver, Ernie Pinckert, Orv Mohler, Jim Musick and Tom Mallory in the backfield is equaled by Capt. Stanley Williamson, Garry Arbelbide, Bob Hall, Johnny Baker and the rest of the forwards.

It is hard to imagine that there can be a team good enough to defeat an eleven that was able to spot Notre Dame 14 points and win out in the final quarter. No southern team has ever been beaten in the Rose Bowl, but it looks as though Tulane will fall tomorrow.

YOU CAN'T OMIT the name of Billy Petrolle when the ring marvels are being listed. Every time they have him tabbed as ready for the scrap pile he bounces right back into the front row by walloping some topliner in a surprising return to form. Last night in another of his surprising comebacks, Petrolle put Billy Townsend away in the seventh round, regained his position as a welterweight crown candidate and forced a boy who had been tipped as a real title possibility to begin his climb all over again. One of the game's most remarkable fighters, anyway you take him.*

MANAGER MAX CAREY has given up the idea of trading Dazzy Vance, and says the 39-year-old pitcher will remain on Brooklyn's staff for 1932 if he is willing to work for salary commensurate with the ability he showed in 1931.

"If he's good enough for the other clubs that have tried to get him, he's good enough for us," said Carey before leaving for Miami, where he will confer with Vance. Brooklyn will offer Dazzy a salary of $15,000 instead of the $23,000 he pulled down last year.

MIKE GETTO, Pitt's all-America tackle in 1928 and for the last three seasons line coach at the University of Kansas, is spending the holidays at his home in Jeannette. He has signed a new contract to coach at Kansas again next year.

Mike Getto

Getto has won a ranking as one of the best line coaches in the country. Ever since he went to Lawrence in 1929 the work of the Kansas forwards has been steadily an outstanding feature of the Jayhawkers' play.

KANSAS WON THE championship of the Big Six Conference in 1930 largely because of the great line that Getto developed. This year the conference title went to Nebraska, but Mike rates Bo McMillin's Kansas Aggies as the best team of that region encountered by Kansas during the season. Getto is enthusiastic over the start of another Jeannette boy in athletics at Kansas. Ernest Casini has made a brilliant beginning in both football and basketball. Though he had played end at Jeannette High School, Getto turned him into a guard for the Jayhawkers on the gridiron with splendid results, and the youngster is also showing much promise as a guard on the varsity basketball team. Casini is only a sophomore, and Getto predicts a brilliant career for him in his junior and senior years.*

GRID CURTAIN DROPS

Sandlot football's window will be marked tomorrow afternoon when the Hill Top Civics and Knapp club clash at Wayne Park at 2:30. Followers of the Civics expect Yank Ober and Marcellario to play a big part in the game, which will settle the South Hills championship.

TULANE SET FOR TROJANS

REID TO SHIFT COMBINATIONS FOR INDIANS

By CARL W. SHATTO

Two victory-hungry teams will meet at Duquesne Garden at 8:30 tonight when the Yellow Jackets meet the Cleveland Indians in an International League hockey fixture. Neither team has sated its appetite for triumphs in recent weeks, and the battling promises to be fast and furious for the tender morsel that will enable one or the other to break its "fast."

Cleveland and Pittsburgh long have been regarded as natural rivals. They display no gentle feelings when nothing in particular is at stake, but tonight each will have an unwelcome victory incentive. The league standings today indicate that it will be either the Jackets or the Indians who will have to join the Syracuse Stars in the discard when the annual title play-offs get under way. Each would just as soon that it is the other who is discarded.

NEW COMBINATIONS

Coach Charley Reid, of the Jackets, will use new front line and backfield combinations in an effort to pull the locals out of their slump. Doc Romnes, star forward sent here by the Chicago Hawks when Frank Ingram was recalled a few days ago, will be at center in the starting lineup. He will be flanked by Earl Miller, who heretofore has performed as a pivot, and Ty Arbour.

Norman Locking, who came here as a left wing, but who has so much pep that he is willing to skate in any position, will be at center on the second forward line with Capt. Tory Gregg at right wing and Cam Proudlock in the left lane.

The third line will be made up of Rodden, Halliday and Barjon, and they will appear in their accustomed positions.

FIELDS, FRASER BACKS

The backfielders who will start in front of Goalie Abbie Cox will be Whitey Fields, generally used at center, at right defense, and Gordy Fraser at left defense. The play of the Pittsburgh guards was not at all satisfactory to Coach Reid in Detroit on Tuesday. Fraser and Fields teamed up well together in last night's long drill.

Reid decided upon these new combinations after the hefty practice session, and they appear to have real merit. Romnes, a sensation in the international loop last season, when he led the Tecumsehs to eight victories in about three weeks, did not arrive here until this morning, but he has been playing regularly for Chicago's National Leaguers all season, and is in top form. Tonight's game will mark his debut in a Pittsburgh uniform.

M'GUIRE, SPRING HERE

Two former Pittsburgh skaters arrived here with the Indians. They are Mickey McGuire, center, and Jess Spring, backfielder. Both are veterans well known to local fans.

A victory will enable Pittsburgh to tie Cleveland for fifth place. Their season series is even at one win, one tie and one defeat apiece. The advance ticket sale is reported as being exceptionally heavy, and a capacity crowd is virtually assured. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Cleveland
Cox	G	Woods
Fields	L.D.	Spring
Fraser	R.D.	MacFarlane
Thompson	C.	Brydon
Miller	L.W.	Duffell
Arbour	R.W.	Williams

Spares—Pittsburgh, Halliday, Rodden, Barjon, Gregg, Locking, Proudlock, Maitre. Cleveland, Daley, Metcalfe, Gray, Dunning, B. Brooks, Roulston, M. Brooks.

JONES BEATS JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—Billy Jones, shifty Negro warrior from Philadelphia, became the major threat to win the vacated light-heavyweight championship of the world last night by decisively defeating Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro, in the second round of the National Boxing Association's elimination tournament.

Bob Olin, bond salesman, of New York, also advanced to the third round by his victory over Clyde Chastain, Dallas, Tex., in 10 rounds.

SOUTH FETE CARDED

The annual football banquet tendered to South High team is to be given by the South Side Businessmen's Association Thursday of next week at South High School. The speakers include Paul J. Bleichner, Principal J. M. McLaughlin, Attorney R. Rhody Brennen, John C. Grau, Dr. W. A. Gregory, C. L. Washabaugh, William Fisher, Patrick Riley, Dr. James F. Kerr and William D. Mansfield.

PETROLLE STOPS TOWNSEND

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—Billy Petrolle, the battle-scarred veteran from Fargo, N. D., who in the past has drubbed such good fighters as Jimmy McLarnin, Tony Canzoneri and Justo Suarez, is on the warpath again.

Last night, in Madison Square Garden, the old Fargo Express ran over Billy Townsend, slugging Canadian from Vancouver, who was considered one of the brightest prospects in the welterweight division.

The youthful Townsend was literally slaughtered. Petrolle dropped him four times with his famous left hook. After 1 minute 58 seconds of the seventh round, the Canadian was so far gone that Referee Willie Lewis awarded the fight to Petrolle on a technical knockout.

Townsend had to be carried to his corner when the bell saved him at the end of the sixth round. He was made to look like a tyro all the way except for a brief flurry in the second round.

Franta Neklony, European welterweight champion, passed out of the 147-pound picture along with Townsend. Neklony, as wide open as a Reno gambling hall, was given a 10-round beating by Eddie Ran, a Polish slugger, in the semi-final.

Chief Mike Payan, colorful Indian welterweight from El Paso, Tex., dropped Steve Wolanin, Syracuse University student, to the canvas five times before knocking him out in the third round. Vidal Gregorio, Spanish bantamweight, floored Antol Kocsis, of Hungary, four times in winning a 10-round decision.

SANCTIONS REFUSED

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(INS.)—The New York State Athletic Commission has refused to sanction the Bat Battalino-Ray Miller and Tony Canzoneri-Herman Perlick bouts, which were to be held in New York next month.

The commission stated that neither Canzoneri or Battalino would be allowed to engage in further overweight contests until they had successfully defended their titles against worthy opponents.

PITT BEATS TROJANS

By H. C. Carlson

Pitt Basketball Coach.

Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 31.—Well, we beat the Trojans last night, our Pitt Panthers bumping the University of California by a score of 29 to 26 at the Olympic Auditorium.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

And now it is sunny California and sunny Pitt. Tuesday night we met up with old 100, and the same porter, and left Palo Alto high tree on time, but were five hours late here, riding along the seashore and then inland to the great citrus belt, a la Brisbane. We were tremendously impressed with this town and write like McNamee talks, but the boys, grateful to Pitt for allowing this trip, were stimulated to great deeds last night.

Sam Barry's Southern California is a very good ball team, big, strong and close checkers inside. They kept the Pitt boys away from the basket. On the offensive, with three men inside, the two back men brought the ball down, and then the fireworks began with cross-blocking for close-in shots or a pivot pass back for a long shot and an aggressive follow-in.

The Pitt boys scored long shots successfully and were prepared for the opposition, which cluttered the area close to the basket. Near the end of the game, Pitt was leading, 21-18, when a flock of fouls and a field goal apparently sewed up the game, 24-21, for Southern California; but Hughes' long field goal and a foul by Ochsenhirt on the same play tied the

Carothers Rolls 757 for Three Games

Rolling in a doubles match in Johnstown, Charles Carothers, of Johnstown, established what he claims is a new high score record for three consecutive games, using new and standard pins, when he toppled the maples for a count of 757. Carothers had games of 287, 222 and 245.

Carothers was paired with Joe Murray, also of Johnstown, and was opposed by Steve Wolfe, of Johnstown, and Hilary Wertz, well-known figure in Pittsburgh bowling circles. The match was bowled on the Capitol Alleys and was witnessed by Dan Shields, the alley manager.

DUNLAP, WILSON IN FINAL

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 31.—(AP.)—George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, the defending champion, and Richard Wilson, of Southern Pines, the medalist, bested their opponents in the semi-finals of the midwinter golf tournament here yesterday, and today will clash in the final round.

Seeking his sixth championship in this event, Dunlap, Princeton senior and intercollegiate golfing champion, set a stiff pace to defeat Eric D. Thompson, of Springfield, Mass. The globe-trotting New Englander was no match for the slender collegian, and was eliminated 4 and 3.

Wilson, a recent graduate of Georgetown University, had no serious difficulty in disposing of Richard Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., a Williams College linksman, to the tune of 5 and 4.

'DOUBLE' PAYS $1,295

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 31.—(INS.)—The daily double at Jefferson Park paid $1,295.10 for each $2 winning ticket here yesterday. The winner of the second race was Hidden Thoughts, which paid $31.60 straight, and the victor in the third was Tea Green, paying $109.80 for a $2 ticket.

85,000 TO SEE TITLE GAME TOMORROW

PASADENA, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—The Rose Tournament football game here tomorrow has been assured the largest crowd in the history of the event. Tulane and Southern California clash to decide which is to receive the national mythical grid title.

More than 70,000 tickets have been sold, and Trojan officials believe all of the 85,501 available seats will be occupied. The largest previous turnout was in 1930, when Southern California defeated Pittsburgh. Slightly more than 70,000 persons saw the 47-to-14 rout of the Panthers.

Last year the Rose Bowl was enlarged to its present size, increasing the seating capacity by 10,000. There has never been a complete sellout in the 16 years of the intersectional classic.

TULANE WORKS IN SECRET

Tulane set foot on the Rose Bowl greensward for the first time yesterday afternoon, taking its final long workout, a secretive session, on the new sod. Coach Bernie Bierman put the squad through its final defensive paces, running Trojan plays and checking assignments. Then the Green Wave rolled through an offensive drill, which included many passes.

Coach Howard Jones also worked his men hard, dwelling more on offense than any other phase. He is confident of the ability of his players to hold down Tulane's running attack, but is not so sure that Don Zimmerman's long, short and over-all, accurate passes can be sufficiently smothered.

Southern California moved to Pasadena last night, and got its first feel of Rose Bowl turf this morning when the Trojans dashed through their last workout, which was very light.

M'MURDO TO START

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—Eastern and Western football stars have completed heavy training for their charity game here New Year's Day.

The squads were put through long workouts, the Easterners running off ground plays at their Stanford University practice field, while the Westerners polished off on a passing attack, at Berkeley.

Rival coaches indicated the following players would start the game:

East		West
Cox, Colgate	L.E.	Nein, Stanford
Marvil, Northwestern	L.T.	Schwegler, Wash.
Hoffman, Notre Dame	L.G.	Justice, Neb.
Miller, Purdue	C.	Bunn, Colo.
Hickman, Yale	R.G.	Kuster, Neb.
McMurdo, Pitt	R.T.	Edwards, Wash. S.
Hewitt, Yale	R.E.	Wykoff, U.C.L.A.
Chapell, Northwestern	Q.	Mason, So. Meth.
Purvis, Purdue	L.H.	Kramer, San F.
Norton, Dartmouth	R.H.	Tennant, So. M.
Heath, Purdue	F.	Davis, Olympic Club

The East will go into the game with an advantage in weight, Marvil scales around 230 pounds; Hickman weighs 218 pounds; McMurdo, 212 pounds, and Hoffman, 200 pounds. The eastern backfield combination also will hold a decided advantage.

Outclassed in man power, the western team will concentrate on an aerial attack in hopes of chalking up its fifth victory in the annual classic, started in 1925. East teams have won twice.

TECH TO PLAY BUFFALO U.

By JESS CARVER

While ordinary mortals are getting over New Year's eve parties and making resolutions and turning over new "leafs" for 1932, the ambitious basketballers of Carnegie Tech will spend the first day of the new year on a choo-choo, clicking off the long miles to Buffalo, where tomorrow night they'll meet the University of Buffalo varsity passers.

The contest will be the first of a two-game trip for the Tartans. They are booked for an appearance against the University of Chicago Maroons in Chicago Saturday night. Tech has broken even in four games played to date, having defeated Yale and Kentucky Wesleyan and taken it on the chin from Kentucky University and St. Xavier.

Coach Buzz Hogan assembled his varsity performers Tuesday and gave them brisk workouts that day and yesterday and has a final drill on the blackboard for this afternoon.

Included in the Carnegie party will be Coach Hogan, Manager Lauf, Trainer Bert Munhall and Capt. Jim Leonard, Jagnow, Bob Smith, Red Fergus, Ed Stentz, Raudabaugh, Burns, Webster, Petransky, Seigal, Silverman and Freedel.

After meeting Chicago, the boys will hop back home and get set for their next home stand, against Wash-Jeff's Presidents.

HOCKEY DEAL DENIED

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—No player deal is pending between the Detroit Falcons and Montreal Maroons, of the National Hockey League, Manager Jack Adams of the Falcons, said last night. Earlier reports were that Adams and James Strachan, of the Maroons, were considering an exchange of Alex Smith, of Detroit, for Johnny Gallagher and Earl Robinson, of the Maroons.

GIZZY READY FOR TEST AGAINST BERNARD

Clan Douglas, Switch Meet in West Penn Soccer Semi-Final Tomorrow

FANS BEHIND BATTLER IN GARDEN GO

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Different folks have different ideas about the proper way to welcome the New Year.

Some of them will make whoopee tonight and others will go to see Battling Gizzy fight at Motor Square Garden tomorrow night and achieve the same effect.

"Get Dizzy Looking at Gizzy" is the Garden's slogan as it drums up business for the show.

Roger Bernard of Flint, Mich., and Philadelphia, who is managed by Twe Boos Hoff, will be in there with Gizzy. Victor over Battling Battalino, the featherweight champion he will try to succeed where Sammy Dorfman of New York recently failed to solve the Gizzy puzzle. Dorfman couldn't take Gizzy apart to find out what makes him tick and took a good old-fashioned shellacking for his pains.

WINS THE FANS

The whirlwind, ever-swinging Gizzy had the fans almost beside themselves that night and they went away mumbling that here was a ring phenomenon who promised to give them all a lot of trouble. Action is his middle name.

This bout will mark Bernard's second visit to Pittsburgh. He came here highly touted a few years ago to defeat Phil Goldstein at Motor Square Garden. He is a rushing type and swings mostly for the body. He has made some good fights against the top-notchers and some not-so-good ones against other foes.

Gizzy arrived back in town today from St. Michaels, Pa., where he did his training in the mountains, fit for his latest test. Bernard will arrive tonight.

Gizzy is certain to have the fans in his corner tomorrow night. He won them over in no uncertain manner with his earnest efforts against Dorfman and they're pulling for him to get somewhere with his unorthodox but highly satisfactory style.

THOMAS IN SEMI-FINAL

Jimmy Thomas, stablemate of Gizzy, boxes Luis Carpentero, Filipino, of Toledo in the eight-round semi-final. Sunny Jim McVey, Negro light-heavyweight, of Rankin, opposes Buddy McArthur, of McKeesport, in the second bout and Pritze Zivic of Lawrenceville and Pat Gilmore, of East Liverpool, O., are in the opener, at 8:30 o'clock.

Between Rounds

George Parks, Homestead heavyweight, is in tour with Max Schmeling, the world champion, from New York to Miami and Utah will join a Florida tour big wigs with Mickey Walker in February. Negotiations are almost completed. Bruno, Parks' manager, Parks also started with Schmeling for the latter's bout with Young Stribling in Cleveland last summer and broke Frankie Genaro on the card. He was matched with Mickey in May of 1930, but a bad cut over his eye developed and the bout was off.

A Carnegie fight fan suggests that Babe Joe Gans be brought here to box Ted Yarosz. Gans having beaten Bud Cedric Young Serbin and Jackie Brady in battles in the Pittsburgh district.

Tiger Joe West, who will try to start the New Year right by upsetting Joe Sekyra, the Northside butcher, at Franklin tomorrow, is coming ahead in that battle with Ben Jack Black whose decision Gatens promised him a few days ago.

The Phillips and Tiger Jack Sandow will be an all-star card at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. It will be an eight-rounder. Charley Baxter meets Jimmy Thomas, Eddie Brannon meets Sparky Wilson in an eight-round preliminary and Ted Morgan and Walter Keisher are paired for the four-round opener.

Jimmy Delmont boxes Jackie Brady at Indianapolis on January 19 and not turned down a match with Young Terry in the Detroit Olympia arena.

HALL REPORTS ON DEATHS

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—A large measure of responsibility for football's weights toll in deaths and injuries was placed on authorities in charge of organized elevens and the parents of sandlot players by E. K. Hall, chairman of the national football rules committee, in his annual report today to the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

In every aspect except the problem of injuries, now under exhaustive study, Hall said that the football season of 1931 had been most satisfactory, with more versatile attacks developed by the new fumble rule, saner graduate attitude toward the game, less proselyting, better spirit and gratifying responses to the call of charity.

NEW RULES NOT MENTIONED

The chairman pledged the committee, however, to unhesitating action "to lessen the possibility of injuries by additions to or modifications of the present rules" of the causes of the almost 50 deaths during the 1931 season indicate need for new rule legislation. He did not discuss or suggest possible new rules.

Commenting on information already gathered regarding football deaths, Hall said that in 186 college members of the N. C. A. A. only two deaths had occurred, one from a brain injury due to a collision, a type of accident frequent but seldom fatal, and the other from a spinal injury suffered in an ordinary tackle.

Six deaths, he said, occurred in minor college or normal school games. The rest were about evenly divided among boys on high school elevens, in some instances under little or no supervision, and boys in unorganized games under no supervision at all.

GATES, KENNEDY SPEAK

Dr. Thomas Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Charles Kennedy, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Western Conference, also addressed the association today.

Gates reported the "Gates Plan" of faculty control of athletics a success. Kennedy urged more continuous, detailed executive administration. Griffith said that a survey made by the U. of Minnesota disclosed that a big majority of 10,000 questioned favored increasing the emphasis on sports.

DISTRICT LOOP TEAMS SET TO BATTLE

By TOM BIRKS

With Clan Douglas scheduled to meet Union Switch in the semi-final round of the Western Pennsylvania championship tourney at the Westinghouse High School stadium, soccer followers have a real attraction for their New Year's Day entertainment.

It is the one day in the year that the Scotch-born followers of the game really celebrate, and with the two best Scotch teams in the district scheduled to clash in the cup competition, things should take an interesting angle.

In the District League, Douglas and the Switch have far outclassed every other team in the loop, and now are fighting it out for the championship. Switch has never beaten the clansmen, but the Swissvale followers feel that this is a Switch year.

Manager Jack Campbell has had a lucky streak in keeping the same club on the field week after week, without an injury. This teamwork may be the factor that will defeat Douglas.

Manager Frank Mincher stated last night that Moreman would start at center forward. The writer still feels the front line functions best with Moir at center, but Mincher evidently feels otherwise. Mincher also was satisfied with the showing of Moreman in the Westinghouse game, although soccer critics are of the opinion that at least four goals should have come from the foot of the big center.

This might dispel the idea that Mincher was dissatisfied with the showing of Douglas in the Westinghouse game. The Clan mentor last evening stated that he is always satisfied with his club, especially when it wins.

The replayed semi-final junior game featuring the Owls and Castle Shannon, will be staged at South Park. Both games will be called at 2:30 p. m.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Extra Shows In Houses Tonight

There will be midnight New Year's Eve performances in many theaters tonight.

Marian Marsh will be seen on the Stanley screen at the midnight performance in "Under Eighteen," which will be continued for a week in that theater. Jean Harlow will feature the midnight presentation on the stage, with Charles Puddy Rogers coming in person tomorrow.

The Fulton's midnight show will feature a preview of "Suicide Fleet," "Delicious," the Gaynor-Farrell film, continues a second week as the regular feature.

"Manhattan Parade," starring Winnie Lightner, opens at midnight tonight in the Warner.

The midnight show in the Davis will feature "Her Majesty Love," which will be continued as the regular attraction. Marilyn Miller is the star.

Vaudeville will be on the Enright stage for the midnight performance. The film entertainment will be "The False Madonna," featuring Kay Francis.

Jackie Cooper and Wallace Beery will open a three-day engagement at midnight in the Sheridan Square in their film, "The Champ." Vaudeville will be on the stage.

Lew Ayres' "Heaven on Earth" scheduled to open a week's run on the Harris screen Saturday. The stage will have vaudeville.

There will be a midnight show in the Academy followed by an early New Year's morning "milkman's matinee." "Silk Stocking Revue" is the burlesque attraction. Sunday midnight "Kuddling Kuties" will open in that theater.

"Comrades of 1918," German film, will open in the Avenue Cinema Monday.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Ol' Man River is at it again. The entire Mississippi Delta is menaced by the Father of Waters. Although the inundation does not as yet equal the great disaster of 1927, levees in four different counties have crumbled away or are weakening. Spectacular views from the air and from the ground of the flooded district are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, being seen in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters, with a graphic description by the Globe Trotter. The distress is growing hourly. Meanwhile Ol' Man River surges on.

Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, bitterly condemns the proposal that the United States be represented at the coming debt conference to be held at the Hague.

"By means of the moratorium the administration this year saddles upon the American taxpayer $250,000,000. Let Europeans settle their own debts and let America demand the debts justly due Americans," the Senator declares. "We should keep out of European debt conferences and devote our energies to our own problems."

Poor Miss Garbo

The usual routine of chatter that appears here on a morning like this will have to be snubbed until another day—for something so important as Greta Garbo . . . Miss Garbo, who is a movie actress of renown, it appears, was finally trapped by horrid reporters and hocus-focus men in in New York on Saturday . . . There have been complaints about this . . . Friends of Miss Garbo and others challenge the right of the ladies and gentlemen of the press . . . "If Greta Garbo wants some freedom," they argue, "what business is it of you fellows to hound her and torture her that way?" Well, that's exaggerating it a little . . . Greta may have been tortured and hounded by the naughty pressys of New York, but it is her own fault . . .

It started this way the other day . . . Several chroniclers of New York guessed whether Greta was here or not . . . This one put it this way: "Was that Greta Garbo at Soandso's the other day?" . . . Another guessed: "Isn't that Garbo in what hotel?" . . . This is not getting anywhere, of course . . . She is or she isn't . . . And so one of the rags came out (after a broadcaster announced that he met and talked with her) and again guessed . . . The paper wasn't certain . . . "Is It Garbo or Isn't It?" its headlines queried . . . The general public has its favorites on and off the professional platforms . . . The newspapers and their representatives represent the public . . . The public demands and depends upon the newspapers to keep it informed—accurately—about their favorites . . . Greta Garbo certainly must be included in this country's brief list of genuine and popular favorites . . . But Miss Garbo now shuns that public and its representatives . . . She will not consent to an interview, a picture, or give in to the pleas of struggling reporters and photographers . . . All of whom are assigned by their editors to "get that picture of Garbo" or find a cozy spot in any of the breadlines."

Nothing, probably, would have come of Garbo's visit to Manhattan . . . But when Greta was discovered dwelling as a hotel under the name of "Gussie Berger" (the Gussie apparently being her real last name for short), and a columnist recognized her and attempted to talk with her, guards from everywhere surrounded her, helped her escape, and aroused the curiosity of a few editors . . .

Greta's favorite male escort, a 64-year-old director working for a rival movie firm here, guarded her with his very life . . . He outsmarted the town's most persistent journalists . . . "I never see her," he fibbed . . . "She is here for freedom . . . She wants peace . . . She won't answer her phone . . . I cannot help you" . . . Well, on second thought, he didn't outsmart the scribes . . . The scribes respected the man's cunning and behaved themselves . . . They so reported to their chiefs . . . One of them was immediately fired for being what is better known as a second-rate go-getter . . . The substitute came back with a picture of Garbo, taken as she ran from newspaper people . . . When this department caught up with Miss Garbo, in the pantry of her hotel, she fumed because the elevator had not dropped to the basement floor hurriedly enough . . . We squeezed into the lift with her . . . Breathless from running, we pleaded with her as the elevator climbed swiftly to her floor . . . "Miss Garbo," we said, putting on a false face to register humility, "won't you please reconsider and oblige those reporters and photographers with something, a picture or an interview?" . . . "You are all hor-re-bill!" she responded icily . . . And she beat a hasty retreat to her room.

Why? . . . Why do her intimates and those who manage her permit that? . . . If it is privacy she desires and peace of mind, why not do what some other sensitive celebrities do? . . . They summon the press, make them agree to go after a 10-minute chat, and then it's over . . . The reporters are happier and so is the victim . . . If Miss Garbo had said, "I will be glad to see you all, but please do not reveal my address," no honorable member of the journals would have violated that agreement . . . But no . . . Miss Garbo's "act" must go on . . . There must be "mystery" . . . Maude Adams did it, you know . . . Why not the Stockholm barber's little girl, who was made rich by Americans? . . . I saw Garbo cry at 7:25 Saturday evening . . . She was so pale . . . She is very anaemic, stylish, and her bosom swelled and dropped rapidly, so angry was she with the boys and girls of the papers . . . They had flashlighted her two hours before . . .

Oh, I know that Greta no longer needs publicity . . . But we of The papers must cater to that army of heroine-worshipers in these United States . . . In Europe, from where Greta comes, even an alley-cat is permitted to blink at a monarch . . . They even have demonstrations and parades for their queens, so that commoners like you, you, you and Winchell may gape or be awed . . . Over here we select our own princes and princesses and honor them . . . Lindy, frixample—and Miss Garbo . . . Reporters, after all, are merely note-jotter-downers . . . But the historians in the decades to come will have to read what we all write to know! . . . To know what gods we bowed low before . . . Granted that Greta is not assuming a high-hattitude—but is Simply Like That! . . . But why? . . . She is merely an actress! . . . Built up by high-voltaged publicists—with the mystery and aloof gag . . . She wasn't that starchy before she became Somebody . . . Sure! Greta doesn't need the press any more . . . But a current movie magazine contains a likeness of her taken in the days when she did! . . . Greta, whose indifference cost a news photographer his job the other afternoon, is seen in a "still," posing in a bathing suit "on a wintry day" for a phony race . . . That snapshot very likely isn't in Greta's scrapbook . . . But it is testimony that Greta Garbo once needed the assistance of $30 per week news collectors . . . Many of whom need Greta Garbo's assistance now.

P. S. Now she has police protection. Huh.

Trio of Broadway Stars Flash Greetings To Pittsburgh

By GEORGE SEIBEL

During the Christmas eclipse of our Pittsburgh stage I took a walk along the Great White Way to see how the Drama was prospering there—and found conditions reassuring. Two attractions are selling out weeks ahead, both Theater Guild shows. "Mourning Becomes Electra" is one of them—and ought to be selling 10 years ahead—it's the greatest event of the American theater. "Reunion in Vienna" is the other big hit, which the acting of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne has turned into an enormous success. They stood them up even on Christmas Eve, when half the world was trimming trees and the other half making up as Santa Claus.

George Seibel

The success of "Reunion in Vienna" has been so great that Alfred Lunt has bought a dog—the dearest little Dachshund you ever saw. His name is Rudolf, and he is so gentle, bright and intelligent I'm sure he is not a Hapsburg. I asked Alfred whether he was going to try his plays on this dog in the future, and he said, No, we'll continue to bring them to Pittsburgh.

I have two other messages for Pittsburgh from two other of our beloved stars. Philip Merivale is playing in "Cynara," an English drama suggested by Ernest Dowson's famous poem, with its line, "I have been faithful to thee, Cynara, in my fashion." The allusion is remote, as applied to the hero of the drama, and I suggested as a better title "Sir Galahad Slips on a Banana Peel."

Anyway it is a play full of good character drawing, true-to-life drama, latter-day philosophy, and very good acting—and it's a great success. I asked Philip Merivale whether he could tell the friends he has in Pittsburgh when he was coming. And he said:

"When I remember how graciously Pittsburgh received me in 'Death Takes a Holiday,' I hope I'll be coming soon. But when I see that New York is so very faithful to 'Cynara,' I can only add that I hope it will be next season."

After seeing the play, in which Henry Stephenson acts a very fine modern Mephistopheles, I doubt whether we shall see it in Pittsburgh unless late in the season. The same thing is true of Ed Wynn's new show, "The Laugh Parade," which also is a huge success.

I saw Ed Wynn himself, in the box-office, of all places!

"What are you doing?" I asked. "Helping to count the cash?"

Then we talked for 15 minutes before he went back to make up. And he told me he was particularly glad his "Laugh Parade" was a hit because it proved his favorite theory that "clean shows last longest."

"Tell my Pittsburgh friends," he said, "that since the death of Thomas Edison I feel kind of lonely, but I'm doing my best to fill his place. My newest inventions will be a boon to the world."

One of these inventions is a hat—which reminds me that Ed's father, whose name was Joseph Leopold, was in the millinery business. Ed's hat is designed to keep polite men from catching cold. It's a hat he tips when he meets a lady, but brim and crown are separate, and when he tips the brim the crown protects the bald spot. This device really fills a long-felt want—no pun is intended.

FOOLING THE BEDBUG

His other invention is designed to foil that predatory nocturnal prowler, the bedbug.

Ed has constructed a little bed—about 15 inches long. This perfect little bed you stand in a corner of your room, and the bedbugs won't bother you any more because they have a bed of their own.

But I think the greatest novelty of Ed Wynn's show is that he has really put together a bright, beautiful and clean entertainment which makes the highbrow laugh with the lowbrow and proves you can be funny without being filthy.

Ed is probably the most amusing clown on the American stage but there's a philosophy behind his fooling. He said:

"There is only one way to be filthy, but there are a hundred ways to be funny."

And he also told me to tell his Pittsburgh friends that a Pittsburgh boy, a Tech graduate, David S. Gaither, designed the scenery of "The Laugh Parade."

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Mabel Julienne Scott, who will be seen in the role of Nina Leeds when "Strange Interlude" comes to the Alvin next week, is a stage actress who was lured to Hollywood by the movies a number of years ago and has again felt the spell of the footlights. There will be no mats of "S. I." because it takes from 5:30 until 11 to present its nine acts. It will stop for one hour for eats. The box office is boxing for it right now.

Vivienne Segal, who is co-starred with Charles Purcell in the revival of "The Chocolate Soldier," coming to the Nixon Monday, recently came back from Hollywood, where she did "Song of the West," "Golden Dawn," "Bride of the Regiment" and "Viennese Nights" in celluloid. Seats for the militant chocolate drop are on the market today.

As all of us will be holidaying tomorrow, this is the last opportunity for this col. to let you know there will be a kiddies' show in the Nixon Sattidy ayem. Same will be "Beauty and the Beast," presented by the Children's Theater Company of New York.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Empty Speakeasy

IN THE MORNING Telegraph, Beau Broadway laments the fact that he finds it difficult to get many stories these days. What with the federal authorities swooping down and the depression keeping the spenders in their homes, Mr. Beau Broadway points out that the night clubs are no longer sources of news.

"All you'll find in an empty speakeasy is a sob story," he writes, "and probably Mark Hellinger has it already set in type."

Funny thing, Beau, that you should mention that angle just when I had such a story in mind. It's not exactly a sob story, but—well, I guess it's pretty close at that. Pull up a stool, Beau, and listen to how it all happened.

I was walking along a street in the Forties the other night when I passed a middle-aged chap who was sitting in front of a garage.

"Howaya, Mark?" says he to me.

I returned the greeting and stood for a moment.

"What's the matter?" he growled. "Don't you remember me?"

I confessed that I didn't. He shrugged his shoulders.

"The name's Parker," he asserted. "Joe Parker. You're not gonna tell me you're gettin' so big that you forget the old days over this garage. Don't you remember the Flamingo Club?"

The Flamingo Club. Of course I remembered it. About seven years ago the hottest joint in town. But you know how those places go, Beau. Here today and around the corner tomorrow. I smiled.

"Sorry, Joe," I chirped. "My memory's not what it used to be. I recall the place very well now. What's going on up there now? Is it still a speakeasy?"

He shook his head.

"It's nothin' at all now," he muttered. "You wouldn't know the old joint. My garage boss owns the spot and he can't rent it at no price. I'm supposed to be kind of a caretaker for it, and he pays me 10 bucks a month extra to keep my eye on it."

He's wastin' his cough because even the mice have stopped visitin' the place. Want to take a look at it?"

I said I didn't mind. So in we went. We had to go through the garage because the outer door was locked. I laughed as we walked through.

"What's the joke?" asked Mr. Parker.

"Just a memory, Joe," I returned. "I'll never forget the night I played poker down here. The Flamingo Club had closed for the night and, as usual, I was the last customer in the joint. Somebody suggested a poker game down here and I said I'd play.

"Well, we sat down. There were two chauffeurs, the chef, two waiters, the coatroom girl, and I. I thought they were going to play for nickels and dimes. Instead, on the very first deal the waiter who had been serving me all night suggested that we play without a limit.

"I thought he was kidding, but I guess I was the only one. On the fourth hand the coatroom dame dug her hand into a stocking and raised me $50 before the draw. The coatroom girl, mind you! I quit the game on the next deal."

A push of a door and we were in the Flamingo Club. Dirty. Dark. Dismal. The windows were nailed across with boards. In one corner two broken tables. In the center of the room a lonesome chair. The bar had been removed, but the large mirror still remained. On the mirror, just one sign that nobody had taken the trouble to remove. Be It Ever So Humble There's No Place Like Home.

I stood silently and shook my head. The memories of that spot. The hours I wasted. I tell you, Beau, the entire thing was giving me a great kick.

There was the night that the revenue men walked into the place and three judges rushed out without their coats. Ho, ho!

Mr. Parker was talking again.

"Remember the time those three tough guys walked in here and got fresh with some dame at the bar? The boss walked out and told them to cut it out. He said he didn't want nothin' like that goin' on in his joint. The guy who had brought the dame in was too scared to move.

"Well, those tough guys were as hard as nails. One of them says to the boss that they'll do anythin' they feel like doin' in any joint and that the boss had better keep his trap shut. One guy went to his hip, but he was bluffin', 'cause he didn't have no gat.

But the boss didn't know that. He did a very nervy thing when he slapped that mug right across the mouth. In a few minutes, them three tough guys was the sickest-lookin' bunch of bums in town. How we pasted them around before we threw them out!"

I nodded.

"Seems to me I do remember that," I said. "What happened to the girl the boss was protecting?"

"Oh," returned Mr. Parker easily, "she got to be such a nuisance that the boss had to knock her cold, too."

Wish I had more room here, Beau. Those memories kept bouncing. That celebrated female star who would get cockeyed in the corner every night and make love to anybody who so much as looked in her direction. She's the one who grew so angry any time her name was mentioned in print. Said it was an insult to her professional standing. Oh, well, she's dead now. So it doesn't make much difference.

More memories. The time Harry K. Thaw first came into the place. He was supposed to be a great spender, and the joint went wild. They gave him every service you ever saw. His check came to $4 and he tipped the waiter a quarter.

The society girl who was hit over the head with a blackjack. The papers never did get the right story. The time there was a feud on between two gangs, and 10 shots were exchanged right through the front door. The time the cigaret girl eloped with the millionaire, only to find the following day that he had nothing but $5 and two other wives. The time that—

"Hymie Cohen was one of the last guys to run the place," observed Mr. Parker. "Remember Hymie?"

Sure I did. Maybe you knew him, too, Beau. I've written about him before. A colorful character. Happy-go-lucky in his own fashion. He loved to mix with the tough mob.

He mixed once too often. He just happened to be a witness one night when Jack Diamond was mixed up in a double killing in a speakeasy. And since the day nobody has seen Hymie Cohen.

I left shortly after that. Beau, I'll admit, I feel like talking about it a great deal ever since. It's the story of an empty speakeasy. It's dark and sordid now.

And you know what it was before, Beau? Dark and sordid, too.

Sassy Stomach Danger Stops

"I am glad to say that ACIDINE helped me ... as nothing else I ever tried," says W. Evans Windgar. "It ... there are a good many ... as well as gas in the ... have a weak heart."

End gas ... illness ... suffering ... ACIDINE ... trouble ... gists have it.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough due to a cold. It takes but a moment to mix, costs little, and saves money, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle, then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest medicinal agents for severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

SUCCOP BOLTS AS RILEY WINS

For the second time in less than three weeks, Alderman-elect P. F. Riley was elected Republican chairman of the Seventeenth Ward to succeed the late Joseph G. Armstrong at a meeting last night of the ward committee in Birmingham Turner Hall, 1719 South Jane street.

Adherents of Riley's opponent bolted the meeting with their candidate, Co. B. L. Succop, former director of the City Supplies Department, who, with Mayor Kline, is under indictment for irregularities in that department.

A successor to Armstrong as Republican County Committee chairman will be chosen Saturday in North Side Carnegie Hall. William H. Zaefel, secretary of the committee, issued the call for the meeting today. Boyd Euwer and County Commissioner-elect W. D. Mansfield are regarded as receptive candidates.

BONE OF SHEEP IN BOY'S LEG

Charles Dunnington, 10, of Jefferson, W. Va., was back at the home today, looking forward to the day when he may be able to walk, something he hasn't done for two years.

The setback from the spine of a sheep grafted into his own fractured back may be the means which will enable the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dunnington, to walk after being an invalid for two years. He suffered a broken back in an accident.

The operation was performed in the Allegheny General Hospital.

Radio Head Sees 1932 Trade Upturn

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 31 (INS).—Expressing satisfaction with the volume of business turned in during the last year and a hope of a steady increase during the new year, James M. Skinner, president of the Philco Radio Company, addressed 450 dealers and distributors attending a sales convention here. He stated his company had enjoyed steady business and all indications point to a better 12 months in 1932.

Rosenwald Sinking, Children Called

CHICAGO, Dec. 31 (INS).—The prolonged illness of Julius Rosenwald reached a critical stage today and physicians feared the noted philanthropist and merchant king may live but a few days longer.

A call has gone out to all of the multi-millionaire benefactor's children asking them to hasten to his bedside.

Story of a Young Married Couple Caught in Big City's Net

Lancasters Lose Popularity Because of Neighbors' Petty Jealousies

CHAPTER XII.

The one hundred and twenty-five a month Bill earned did not stretch very far. There were deductions for sick care, for the recreation club, for half a dozen things, deductions, too, for the goods bought at the company stores . . . in a take-it or-leave-it fashion.

And Nevis was alone almost all day unless she desired to go calling, which she did not. The one oasis in her mental desert was the sudden appearance, for a short time, of a class mate, married to a young engineer, on a neighboring sugar plantation.

Occasionally they were able to get [illegible] and while Nevis had been very intimate with Montgomery at Wellesley, she leaned on her now as if she had been Della Rose understood her argot and looked as if she had been born on the same planet. But Rose became ill and her young husband, in a panic of terror, sent her home by the next boat to stay with her parents.

There were days when, walking along the stone verandah, looking out to the beauty of the bay, crawling secretly with waste matter and smelling to high heaven, a delight to the eyes and an offense to the nostrils, turning her slim back upon mountains which hemmed in a solid menace, Nevis drove her nails into her palms and shivered, half with her usual chills, the forerunner of fever, and half with a bitterness of nostalgia . . . and would think . . . I can't stand it.

"Can't you get on with the women?" Bill asked her. "You used to have a lot of friends at home." Women! Women who asked her about Bill's salary and her relation to the Higher Up . . . who fingered her little [illegible] and discussed quality . . . women who told her [illegible] gossip about other women . . . Mrs. Brown . . . well, the assistant chief engineer stops there every morning at 10 for coffee. Brown's away, you know, he's never home till noon!" . . . women who borrowed books and catalogues and magazines and rouge and powder and perfume . . . women who wept pitifully because the youngest baby had malaria and there was no chance of getting him home.

BILL IS DETERMINED

She said to herself . . . I'll stick it out. I've got to. It's my fault we're here.

There were, of course, happy interludes . . . times when she and Bill went together to the movies and laughed, hand fast, like children at the absurd and ancient pictures . . . times when they went off on little excursions; times when they sat, closely embraced, in each other's arms, in the dark velvet of a semi-tropical night, with a moon outside their windows as big as a dinner plate and the stars amazingly near, and murmured that they loved one another and were happy.

But Bill had lost weight and color. He was increasingly short-tempered. He threw a native who, pretending to no English was yet able to curse fluently, full through a window one day and quarreled interminably with one of his superiors, a fat-faced young man, whom neither heat nor mosquitoes could disturb and who was reluctant to permit Bill to know more than he had to, to hold down his job, lest he lose his own to the novice.

They were not popular and they knew it. They were utterly unable to play the game as it was usually played. They talked too much and too openly.

Bill said seriously:

"Damned if I'll let 'em beat me. If I can make the grade I'll do it. I'll go back to New York when I've learned enough about this business to make me useful to Uncle Walter and I'll give 'em an earful . . . of misery and graft and a choice paternalistic government which makes spying and tricking wretched ruins out of what were once decent and ambitious men."

SAME AS NEW YORK

Nevis warned:

"He won't believe you. It won't be to his interest to believe you. It's his business after all, Bill."

Bill said, setting a lean jaw, his eyes very blue in his brown face:

"He'll have to believe me. What do you think I've been doing all this time beside riding the rounds and time clocking and vaccinating bulls and seeing the sugar processed? I've got figures and statistics! And I talked last week to Grayson, they fired him, you know, he was the chemist. It's a nice mess."

Nevis said nothing. She leaned back in the wicker chair on the veranda and smoked steadily to keep the mosquitoes away. She thought . . . it isn't very different from New York, after all. The people are different and the surroundings as far as background is concerned. But for the rest it is the same, the same idleness and fever, heat and rushing about and getting nowhere. The same back-biting and scandal and gossip and hurting each other.

Bill said again, heavily:

"Darned if I'll let them beat me."

He was discovering a curious fact about himself, an ability to dig his teeth in and to hang on, an ability to get ahead doggedly. There was no trading here on his personality, his charm, his "contacts." He might make friends because of charm and personality, he might be treated a little gingerly by men who were suspicious of him because of his position as Walter Mason's nephew, he might be able to be the social life of a rather dull party because of his talent for mixing. But otherwise it all got him nowhere. Hard work and plenty of it, the capacity for taking it on the chin, the gift for seeing through a situation, outwitting the usual spies and foreseeing the usual narrow politics, these were the things which counted. How he dressed, what had been his university, what old college friends he had, how well he could put over a sale, helped by a delightful grin and a good luncheon and a flock of drinks, didn't count at all. He grew, by degrees, tremendously interested in the industry and in his end of it. Like all young people he was a reformer at heart and burned to reform the entire organization, to say nothing of the business itself. In a very small way he put through several such reforms, including some saving of waste and some saving in time. But these reports never reached Mason. "What the hell is the boy doing down there, anyway," he asked his wife. Yancy wifes very guardedly about him. Wonder if he's hitting it up?"

He was not, save for very occasional lapses out of sheer boredom after work. The climate, malaria and liquor did not, he discovered, mix very well. He was, on the whole, happier than Nevis. He had a job to do, he had something to learn, he had a dogged determination not to give in, and he worked 12 hours a day, and manlike, could find something in common, if only a discussion of past prize fights or of present sugar methods, with most of the men he met. And was comfortably unaware that Nevis was any more miserable than the external circumstances warranted.

Nevis thought of another unpleasant year in Porto Rico.

But she was. She was suffering deeply, by the time their first year in Porto Rico had passed, from the jealousy of the other women who refused to understand why the Lancasters were persona grata with Powers, as Bill made no more money than did their own husbands and had a less influential job. The first eager rush to call, to make friends, to entertain Nevis and Bill died away. And reports were spread, much as in the case of Mrs. Brown. There was, said the women, very little reason why the Lancasters should receive so much "important" social recognition unless Nevis had "a good deal of influence" with the male executives.

At the end of their first year they were transferred back to the plantation and Bill started out again, riding the cane fields and vaccinating the excessively annoyed bulls, once, in very grave danger of his life when a bull got away from the ropes and hands of the helpers and started to charge the tall enemy with the large and painful instrument of bovine torture in his hand.

Nevis was glad to get back "home." Mrs. Jones had looked after her things for her, the house on stilts was as she had left it. There were fewer people, fewer necessary contacts. She could sit on her porch and watch the ox-carts pad by and depend for her slight outside contacts on Mrs. Jones, with her nervous amiability and capacity for friendship.

Bill said:

"Another year and I'll be able to go back and tell them a thing or two!"

She echoed mentally another year, another eternity! She saw herself growing less and less pretty, more and more faded, more and more prone to slackness in dress and hair and skin and hand care. She had not been able to find Anna again on her return and so was doing all the housework herself, and had learned, in the year, to haggle in Spanish with the tradespeople. She had had one interlude of resolutions, their second Christmas, when the people from home sent down great boxes of gifts. Her mother had sent clothes, too. Not purchased in New York but looking like a Paris trousseau to Nevis. "I don't know," wrote her mother, "what you are able to get down there." Della had sent books and canned delicacies. "Bill, caviar and pate . . . we'll have to give a party for the Jones'!" and the boxes of new cosmetics from the smartest shops. "Take care of your complexion, darling," wrote Della, who strongly suspected several things despite Nevis' defiantly gay letters, "and you needn't give a darn what happens."

But they ate up the pate and caviar and the other things and after a month or two of experimenting with skin foods and astringents these lay idle in Nevis' bureau drawer, a prey to cockroaches and ants. Because even the exertion of massage and heating water for steaming and of using a rubber patter strenuously, was after a while, too much of an effort. And so she would let her hands fall to her sides and regard the sallowness and roughness of her skin wearily, and feel the sweat start out on her forehead, and give it all up as a bad job.

But she wouldn't cry quits. She studied Spanish assiduously, she made Bill tell her every last little detail of his work, she worked with him as much as she could, following his mental processes, arguing with him, discussing politics and policies and methods and ways and means. She said to herself, her teeth set, I'll not give in before he does.

They tried reading together; not only the books Della sent out but the technical volumes Nevis asked for for birthday and anniversaries or for which she set aside a little every month. But it was impossible to keep a light on in the living room at night, and, once in bed, under the mosquito netting and with the bed lamp turned on, Bill would fall asleep, sometimes to wake to the brief delirium and headaches of the chronic disease which was entrenched in his thinned blood, and took hold of him at every letting down of a lowered resistance.

But were they, she wondered, getting anywhere here? Of course, Bill was learning the business and she was helping him, to the limit of her power.

So they took what comfort they could from their love and what happiness they could get from being together and said nothing. And when the wife of one of the managers of a neighboring company's plantation decided that Bill was the only bright spot in a very deadly place, Nevis said nothing and bore it in silence, watching Bill [illegible] into something of his old self, [illegible] soft eyes and caressing ways and judicious flattery.

Synopsis

Nevis and Bill Lancaster's ideal married life is of short duration. Complications set in when Bill makes a success selling bonds and they live beyond their means. Then Bill meets Olive Blanchard, who tries to win him. Although Bill sees Olive frequently, he loves only Nevis. Nevis, however, believing Bill is having an affair with Olive, encourages the attentions of Harry Carter. News of a friend's divorce makes Nevis realize how near the precipice is her own marriage and she begs Bill to take her away. He secures an inspector's position on a Porto Rican sugar plantation and he and Nevis begin again. Their former harmony is missing, however. One day Bill comes upon Nevis innocently holding hands with Harrison, a sugar expert from the States. A scene follows and Harrison's influence affects Bill in business and society. He blames Nevis. The climate disagrees with Nevis and she is homesick but does not complain.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Have you ever wondered why our club was called the Junior Komic Club? The secret is out!

Hereafter, on Sundays, when the big 16-page Sunday Sun-Telegraph Comic Section comes to our house, we shall have someone of our very own to read them to us.

When we tune in on WCAE exactly at 12:30 o'clock noon Sunday, we will find Uncle Bob reading the Sun-Telegraph comics to a little girl named Betty. Betty, being an inquisitive little thing, will ask all the questions that we would ask if Uncle Bob could hear us—such as "Why does Jiggs always wear a high silk hat?" "Can Mickey Mouse really sing?" "Why does Popeye always want to fight?" "Does Skippy really say his prayers?" Of course, some of the questions will make us laugh, and Uncle Bob will lose patience with Betty, just as big people sometimes do with us when they can't think of the answers quickly enough!

WORRY REMOVED

But we don't have to care now! We have someone on whom we can depend to read the funnies to us every Sunday. Uncle Bob loves children and he never gets tired, and we will learn to look upon Betty as a little playmate who visits us every Sunday.

Don't forget—next Sunday—WCAE—at 12:30 noon! The big Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club big radio party!

The first meeting of the new year will be held at all Warner Theaters, where chapters have been established, on Saturday, January 2. On this page you will find a schedule, telling you at what time the meeting at your neighborhood theater begins. If you are not a member of the club, go to the meeting anyway. The manager of the theater will give you an application blank to fill out, and you will receive a membership card and button. You will then be entitled to participate in the contests that are held every Saturday, and will be a regular member of a great club.

COMBINED GREETINGS

The Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club takes this opportunity of wishing all their members a very happy New Year.

I INTEND TO GO JUST FAST ENOUGH TO KEEP A BIT AHEAD OF COLLECTORS, AND SLOW ENOUGH TO TAKE EVEN THE WIDE CURVES ON ALL FOUR WHEELS.
I'LL MAKE A LOT OF NOISE GOING UP HILLS AND BE RAZZED BY BABIES IN BIGGER CARS, WHO LATER ON WILL HIGHBALL ME AND BORROW ENOUGH GAS TO GET TO SOME FILLING STATION THAT GIVES CREDIT WITHOUT ASKING TOO MANY QUESTIONS.
YES SIR, I'LL JUST CHUG-CHUG ALONG, KEEPING ON MY OWN SIDE OF THE ROAD AND MOVING OVER FOR THOSE DRIVERS IN TOO BIG A HURRY TO GET TO THE HOSPITAL
ALSO, I'LL PROBABLY LOSE A LOT OF TIME STOPPING TO HELP HITCH-HIKERS WITH A CHILD ON ONE ARM AND A PAPER SUITCASE IN THE OTHER ONE, BUT I'LL GET THERE ANYHOW, AND THE ONLY RESOLUTIONS I'LL MAKE IS NOT TO BLOW MY HORN TOO OFTEN, AND IF I FALL ASLEEP AT THE WHEEL AND GO INTO A CREEK, TO BLAME NOBODY BUT OLD G. A Beacon of Hope

New Year Brings U. S. Privilege of Honoring Washington, Renewing His Precepts

E a beacon of hope, the New Year dawns for the American people, because it brings them the inestimable ge of celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the of George Washington—"of good men the greatest, of men the best."

edicated as it will be, North, East, South and West to her of his country, this bi-centennial year cannot fail to a new awakening to the exalted character of Washing- id to the immortal principles upon which the founder of public laid firm its foundation.

ecent events sternly emphasize the enduring wisdom of ngton's foreign policy of no entangling alliances and of loyal devotion to the constitution with whose adoption most to do.

state of the world as the New Year starts warns us anew that Washington knew whereof he spoke when he as he prepared as a nation at all times, afield and afloat, hoose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice ounsel."

nd at home the bi-centennial year finds the American suffering the consequences of their own folly in depart- m those sound principles of business integrity, economy rugality that Washington exemplified throughout his life.

he historical significance of this great anniversary Con- recognized eight years ago when it created the United Commission for the Bi-Centennial Celebration.

ollowing the plan of the commission, this celebration nclude the entire household of the nation. Twenty nd towns, cities and communities will have a part in it. man, woman and child under the flag will be free to bute to it.

the chief aim of this national observance is to stir the eart, inform the mind and inspire the patriotism of the American family and bring home to its every member a understanding of the moral grandeur of Washington's ter and of the noble and enduring principles and es of the government that he established.

uring the years which have elapsed since the Declaration pendence, the adoption of the constitution, and the fare- ldress, the marvelous progress of the American people n for the American nation the leadership of the world. adership is chiefly due to those American institutions owe to Washington and the patriots who supported cies.

" this leadership is to continue, if America is to grow in and influence, THE AMERICAN PEOPLE MUST WHAT THE PRINCIPLES AND PURPOSES OF GREAT REPUBLIC ARE, they must keep them in nd put them continuously into practice.

e bi-centennial year offers every American a golden nity to possess himself of this knowledge and recall umstances which brought our government into being evil which it was designed to overcome.

RE is no better way for any American to begin the bi- ntennial year than by turning to Washington's farewell for guidance and inspiration.

l who "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the ad- d counsel and the warnings of this message will be ed anew with a desire to know more about Washing- d the other founders.

nd every American can familiarize himself with the lives rks of the founders by reading during this anniversary Lodge's "Life of Washington." Tom Watson's as Jefferson," Oliver's "Alexander Hamilton," Ford's Many Sided Franklin." Hosmer's "Samuel Adams." "Patrick Henry," Gay's "James Madison," Gilman's Monroe," and Magruder's biography of the great chief John Marshall.

o read these entertaining and enlightening biographies eet the founders of the republic, to learn what they stood realize what they contributed to the foundation of the ment under which we live and the nation of which we part.

S, as our own Ralph Waldo Emerson reminds us, "Every uman institution is the lengthened shadow of a man," r American institutions are "the lengthened shadow" of unders of the republic.

the bi-centennial year of 1932 brings this fact home to nerican people, it will bring them closer toward the goal lich George Washington in the farewell address bids us

"Be a nation; be American; be true to yourself."

What's In the Bag?

January approaches and another New Year's.

What does it hold in store for old Mother Earth, mean- ing the world in the human sense? It is a solemn and por- tentous moment. Mother Earth hopes for the best, and where there is hope there is justification for it.

The pealing of the New Year bells will be a rousing call for courage, hard work, confidence and a belief in the good that is to come.

There is still more mending to do on the path to prog- ress, but if the future is faced with a determination to over- come the handicaps, the failures and the evils of the rapidly dying year then, no matter what happens, only good things will come out of the 1932 bag.

Now for American Distress

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

A member of Congress has announced that within 72 hours of the time Congress convenes again he will introduce a resolution for the impeachment of Secretary Mellon. This will be predicated on the fact that there is a law on the statutes forbidding a Secretary of the Treasury to be engaged in trade. The point was raised against Mr. Mellon in the beginning, but nothing was done about it.

In former times this same pro- vision of the law was taken seri- ously. When Grant nominated Mr. Stewart, the merchant prince of New York, for the position of Secretary of the Treasury, the Senate, friendly to the admin- istration and with an over- whelming Republican majority, refused to confirm him because of this law. To save unnecessary embarrassment, the chairman of the committee, passing on the confirmation, called Grant's at- tention to the law and convinced him that it made a confirmation impossible.

Grant then asked if a resolu- tion could not be passed specifi- cally exempting Stewart from its provisions, but he was told this was impossible. No Republican in the Senate would support the President on that nomination, though loyal to the administration and having admiration and re- spect for Stewart. It was pointed out to Grant that there was a sound reason to support the statute; that men interested in matters affecting the Treasury ought not be in charge.

However that may be, one of two things should be done; that statute should be observed, or it should be repealed. Violations of laws by the heads of a nation do not set a good example for the man in the street.

Congress Has Made Its Position Clear

The administration of Mr. Hoover clearly is in a quandary over the debt parley at The Hague. If he gave Ramsay MacDonald, M. Laval and Grandi to under- stand that he could carry the American people with him on a proposition to transfer the debts of Europe to the American tax payers there is reason enough for embarrassment. But if he gave no such impression—and these conferences being secret diplomacy we know nothing of what occurred —there is no reason why he should be embarrassed. The Congress has made its position clear; and it is the emphatic position of the American people.

While the press reports have it that the administration is "cool" toward the invitation to the debt conference, we are informed that when Mr. Walter W. Stewart, who sat in at Basle, returns, he may be able to convince us that we really must assume the debts of the 14 nations. That is quite impossible. Mr. Stewart is not the chosen rep- resentative or spokesman of the American people.

Meanwhile, discovering rather late in the day that we have a representative form of democracy and not an autocracy, the tone of the European press is enough to solidify nine-tenths of our people against the debt scheme.

Debtor Nations Can Meet Their Obligations

All the time we are hearing that in the event the reparations are scaled down it must be at the expense, not of the nations that have been getting the reparation, but at our expense. Grave Euro- pean statesmen express the opin- ion that our debtors cannot meet their obligations to us and must take advantage of the moratorium clause providing a two years' re- cess. That is their privilege. It is also their privilege to default.

But none of these grave Euro- pean statesmen have explained why the nations that were able to spend almost $2,600,000,000 in a year on increasing their arma- ment cannot meet their obliga- tions by a very insignificant scal- ing down of the amount they are spending on arms.

We have sponsors for the Euro- pean plan in America, but we are still waiting for some of them to answer this simple question.

Practically every one of the debtor nations can meet their ob- ligation of honor if they will. At any rate, the majority can. If there are some few that cannot, they have their recourse in the two-year recess or in a default.

Government Should Help The American People

The American people spoke un- mistakably in the amendment to the moratorium measure in the Congress. The time has come for the American government to con- cern itself with American dis- tress. Lest we forget, in hearing so much about the "distress in Europe," it is well to remember just now that—

There are 7,000,000 American breadwinners on the streets de- nied the right to earn their bread in self-respecting toil.

There are 20,000,000 men, women and children involved in dire dis- tress by this unemployment.

There are a few million miners who are out of work because of the collapse of the mining in- dustry.

There are many million farmers who are on the verge of ruin where they are not over.

And if any important part of these 7,000,000 jobless men are put to work it would mean more business for the hard pressed mer- chants, more production in the factories, less of a wasting sur- plus in the farms.

Now that the administration promises to devote more time to the distress in America it is to be expected that these human beings, many millions of them, will not be entirely forgotten.

These are the people who are not forgotten when the war bugle sounds.

Senator La Follette Pleads For a Prosperity Loan

Senator La Follette announces that after the recess he will ask for a prosperity loan of $5,000,000,000 to launch an enormous federal building program which he contends will put 4,500,000 men to work.

This is the idea urged some time ago by Mr. Hearst.

It would have been infinitely better had such a program been adopted in an extra session during the summer months; for the job- less would have benefited during the winter. But we are going to have this vast army of the un- employed with us for a while, and if as many as 4,000,000 men, now deprived of jobs and purchasing power, can be put to work the effect on trade would be to revive it speedily.

The administration, however, clings to the notion that while it is concerned with railroad troubles and bank troubles and Big Busi- ness troubles, it has nothing to do in respect to these millions of workers. These it passes on to private charity and the smaller governmental units. Referring to this point of view Senator La Fol- lette says:

"Unemployment is nation-wide and therefore is a national prob- lem. It cannot be solved by local treatment alone. This federal work ought to be done now, when money is cheap and distress is great, when a dollar will do more in the way of giving relief to the unemployed and also secure more in the way of actual construc- tion."

Now that the administration announces its concentration on American distress, it is to be hoped that this plan of putting men to work to the lasting advan- tage of the nation will be sympa- thetically considered.

Happiness—The capacity for loving everybody a little, and somebody a lot.

A man may feel lonesome while his wife is in Palm Beach for the whole winter, but he doesn't feel utterly "lost," until his watch is laid up at the jeweler's for a whole week.

Marriage is like Christmas. Something to which every woman looks forward; which every man dreads; in which most people are disappointed—but which nobody wants to miss.

The surest way to inspire a man to ask for a life-interest in your heart is to let him know that some other man has an option on it.

* * *

The difference between a man's love and a woman's love is merely a matter of dimension. A woman loves too long—and a man loves too widely.

* * *

The only thing that a woman can't forgive a man is for ceasing to love her before she has stopped loving him. And the only thing that a man can't forgive a woman is for beginning to love him be- fore he has begun to love her.

When Noses Come Down.

I used to be fastidious. I am no more—not I!
I'm thankful now for anything my flattened purse will buy!
I used to lunch on broccoli, with partridge-under-bell—
But now a swiss-cheese sandwich seems a feast that's simply SWELL!

I once insisted that my hats be labeled from Parre—
But now a home-made bonnet is quite good enough for ME!

I used to be fastidious—but, hear my sad confession!
My nose came down, like yours—and yours—when we hit the depression!

Enter a man's heart as care- lessly as you like, but always re- member to "choose your exit," in case you find it getting too over- crowded.

Isn't It So?

Dead dogs wag no tails.

After a man reaches the age of 55, today is only another day.

Misery loves company and makes the company very mis- erable.

An old maid is nothing more nor less than an unemployed back seat driver.

Most people believe there isn't any progress if they haven't any- thing to do.

The only way some husbands and wives can remain friends is by getting a divorce.

The modern man of the hour is any man whose wife has asked him to wait a minute.

With some people today the small voice of conscience is noth- ing more than a body squeak.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—The vanishing Rialto is resorting to the catch-penny devices of the street carnival to attract passersby. The cheap burlesque houses offer mechanical men, sleight-of-hand performers and quartets in their foyers.

Startling banners unfurl in the Broadway breeze for cinema tem- ples. Barkers on pedestals screech circus lot spiels. A single file pa- rade of sandwich men, each with a huge letter on his back, weaves in and out spelling the name of a new film.

One legitimate theater has a lobby display, featuring among other gadgets a guillotine with a placard: "A quick hair cut;" a baby's whatyoucallem labeled: "Gandhi's costume at birth and now;" a pistol with the sign: "The original inventor of the hole in one."

Then, a miniature window re- vealing two pairs of girls' shoes. One pair all muddy bears the tag: "Worn by a good little girl." The other, neat and bright, heralds: "Worn by a bad little girl." Hu- man spires on stilts step in and out motor traffic with ponderous steps.

In one movie ticket cage is a lady whose arms are a glitter of tattoo pictures. A fire eater, swallowing gulps of flame, per- forms on a platform nightly in front of a West Forty-second street playhouse and live ele- phants sway before the African hutch front of a movie on Eighth avenue.

Another stunt to fill empty pal- aces is the sale of blocks of seats to low priced gowns and millinery shops to be given away to pur- chasers. Calliopes toot merrily up and down trucks stem to advertise cabarets and floor shows.

Inside many cheaper pleasure halls the performance is stopped at intervals while a spieler offers a ballyhoo which winds up with sales of song books, prize pop corn packages and in some instances suggestive photographs a la Parisian.

On a theater program the other night I noticed the name of Wal- ter Wyahlbyeth. And I could not keep my mind on the play the rest of the evening trying to pronounce it. It's a job for a lisper anyway.

Also I noticed on Broadway in the 40's a Rector's offering 50- cent luncheons and 85-cent din- ners.

A friend attended a swanky dinner in East Fifty-fourth street. The host was an elderly gentle- man and student of cooking. The dinner was especially selected. To- ward the end of the meal a mod- ern lady with arch vivacity in- quired: "Do you mind if I smoke?" He coolly replied: "Very much"—and went on talking of something else. But no one seemed to listen.

The town has been thick with whispered tales of ptomaine poi- sonings in one of the new and magnificent hotels. Every city edi- tor dispatched shrewd investi- gators. No evidence could be found. It is old and malicious propaganda facing almost every hotel after opening.

On soberly gray days that come with mid winter I enjoy strolls in Brooklyn's Prospect Park. It has nothing of the gritty industrialism of Manhattan and the metropoli- tan roar becomes the far-away beat of wings. In the park you see baby carriages, ponies and dog carts, elderly couples in closed cabs, and hear the chimes of con- stantly tolling church bells and somehow one expects to see am- bling vicars and foxhunters flying by in red coats. Too, many New Yorkers have discovered Brooklyn. The contrast is as marked as that between the soft hush of Amster- dam canals and the strident honk- ings of Paris.

Conrad Nagel has been making personal appearances around New York during the holidays. He was a hardened trouper who stormed the tanks long before his out- standing success in Hollywood. And in Hollywood, incidentally, he is deservedly one of the most pop- ular of the movie crowd.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

People falling into love.
People falling out of love.
Getting sad . . . getting mad . . . blaming love.
What's wrong with love?
Nothing's wrong with love. The fault's in us . . . in our notions about love.

WE EXPECT TOO MUCH OF LOVE.

We expect that love should do things for us which we should have done for ourselves long be- fore love came our way. We ex- pect that it should settle prob- lems and smooth out difficulties which have nothing whatever to do with romance.

What are we doing in those years before the Grand Passion arrives? We are growing up. We are developing our personalities. We are accumulating certain habits, attitudes, prejudices and ideas . . . we are establishing cer- tain relationships with the rest of the world.

But are all of these habits and ideas healthy? Are all of these relationships harmonious? Is this personality which we have achieved a really successful af- fair? Far from it. Though we have become mature in years, we are still anything but mature in character. We're moody, rest- less, timid and cantankerous. We're still cry babies—longing for the moon. Half baked. Wet be- hind the ears.

And, of course, such weakness and cussedness impose certain penalties. We make some friends but we also make many enemies. We get into jams. We miss out on chances. We suffer boredom and bewilderment and humiliation. We constantly feel that life isn't what it should be. Sometimes, though rarely, we're honest enough to acknowledge that this is our own fault.

Then along comes Love! Shakes us up as we've never been shaken before! Puts a new fire in our blood, a new song in our heart, a new glamour over all the earth.

AND FORTHWITH WE ARE CONVINCED THAT ALL OUR DIFFICULTIES ARE AT AN END.

Here, at last, is what we've al- ways needed. Here's a Wonder Worker that will dispel all our fears, steady our uncertainties, sooth our peevishness, comfort our loneliness, make us wise and gen- tle and strong. And, above all, keep us interested and excited! No more dull moments—for we're in love!

And so we marry. And, for a while, all is bliss.

Then presently—in a few months or a few years—the reaction sets in. We discover, to our horror, that something is wrong. Love isn't working out as we thought it would. The old confusions are coming back . . . the old bore- dom. We get the blues, just as we used to do. We fly into tempers . . . We become discouraged and restless. We can't stick at things. Life is just as monotonous, just as tiresome, as it was before we met!

Well, we might have known. People warned us that love didn't last. People hinted that we weren't really mated. And now see how right they were. For if this love of ours had been the Real Thing it would never have fizzled out this way . . . and life would still be the Wonderful Dream that it seemed the day we met.

And so we part. And go around saying that you're a fool if you trust love. Though, perhaps, if one could find Someone Who Really Understood—

And all the time it wasn't love's fault at all. Our love was real, and wisely used, it could have brightened and sweetened all our days. But love wasn't a handy man. It couldn't attend to all our psychological chores . . . clear up all our spiritual untidiness. That was up to us. That was a job we should have performed for ourselves . . . married or single.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

As a successful man, what is your treatment of your boyhood or your young manhood friends who have not enjoyed so much prosperity?

Are you patronizingly friendly or frigidly polite when you meet?

Indicating that you feel sorry for them shows you believe them more or less incompetent, and such an attitude from you, hurts.

It is not necessary for you to be coldly tolerant in order that the old friends may realize your up and up financial status.

They will recognize the fact when true and will not try to carry on with you.

But there is another motive, sometimes, back of the treatment of former friends and that is that you do not want your present as- sociates to learn of your former financial situation or the friends of former years.

What a small minded kind you are to desire to drop friends of previous years because of a dif- ference in financial standing.

Not muscle bound but hide bound by money and position.

True friends meet on a basis of mutual experience and sympa- thy.

True friendship does not realize a difference because of financial possessions.

But the shoddy sort of friend- ship does.
